Audit exposes irregularities in Sh6.3 billion cover for police

BY DAVID MWERE

Auditor-General Nancy Gathungu has flagged the Sh6.3 billion spent on providing medical insurance cover for the police and prison officers, citing irregularities.

She notes non-payment of claims despite requests being lodged. The revelations raise fears that the 141,961 principal members and their beneficiaries may have got a raw deal in the contract the National Police Service (NPS) awarded to a private insurer.

In a report on NPS accounts for 2023/24 currently before Parliament, she says accounting officer Bernice Lemedeket failed to monitor implementation of the funds as required by law "to ensure contract terms were complied with and ensure value for money and benefit to members and their beneficiaries".

In 2023, the NPS contracted the National Health Insurance Fund (NHIF) to provide cover to uniformed officers. The NHIF then partnered with a consortium of insurance companies to provide the cover—Group Life, Work Injury Benefit Act (Wiba) and Group Personal Accident (GPA)—at an annual premium of Sh5.08 billion for 141,961 principal members and their dependants.

They included 109,557 police officers and 32,404 prison officers. The contract period was one year (January 1 to December 31, 2023). Upon expiry, it was extended by three months to March 2024 at a premium of Sh1.3 billion. Ms Gathungu says a review of insurance records revealed unpaid claims relating to Group Life benefits, injury GPA and Wiba claims. For instance, the contract provides that when a member is out of work as a result of an injury or illness, they shall be entitled to compensation for loss of gross salary up to a maximum of two years.

This is subject to the human resource policy at the time of injury or illness. The audit says a review of insurance records revealed that the insurer had not settled 262 unpaid GPA claims, despite having been notified. Clause 2.3.1 of the contract provides that upon the death of a member, their next of kin is paid a lump-sum compensation equivalent to five years' annual basic salary.

"As at the time of the audit, the insurer had not paid 21 claims worth Sh43.5 million in respect of the group life sum assured," the audit states. "This was contrary to contract terms, which states that claims shall be paid within five days after notification and provision of all documents."

The contract also provides that temporary disablement shall be compensated through a periodical payment equivalent to a member's salary. "Periodical payments shall be made for as long as the temporary disablement continues but not for a period that exceeds 12 months," the contract reads.

But according to Auditor-General Gathungu, a review of insurance records revealed that the insurer had not settled 509 Wiba claims and two Wiba deaths. This was against contract provisions, which state that death or total disablement under Wiba or due to occupational accident shall be compensated at a rate of eight years' gross salary of the beneficiary.

Taxpayers' expense Counties grapple with reduced cash to fund development projects

Employees have turned devolved units into cash cows, stealing public funds through proxy companies

BY JOSEPH WANGUI

When Mr Michael Kuria, the former Nyandarua county government chief finance officer, was asked by the anti-corruption agency how he accumulated Sh329 million wealth within two years against a net salary of Sh2.1 million, he cited family businesses such as selling purified water, inheritance and other investments.

But the Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission (EACC) did not believe him and the court also doubted his explanation. The High Court found the explanation untenable as the wealth was widely disproportional to his legitimate and known income.

Thus, a chunk of his wealth, including vehicles, parcels of land and cash in bank, was declared unexplained assets and forfeited to the state. He acquired the massive wealth from the county government—between March 2014, when he joined the county government, and June 2016, when he resigned—through contracts awarded to seven firms owned by his proxies, including relatives and business associates.

His case is among many involving multimillionaire public officers at county governments who are in court fighting to prove legitimacy of their wealth amid accusations of turning the devolved units into cash cows.

In the past 12 years, counties have become hotspots for corruption. Officials use shell companies and proxies to syphon public funds. The latest case involves a security warden at the Turkana government, Abenyo Amathwel Etiir, who has acquired Sh263 million in slightly over two years between November 2022 and September 2024.

Part of it, Sh180 million cash in bank, has since been frozen by the EACC, pending a recovery suit. The money was wired to his two trading companies named Akimata Limited and Irina Health and Motor Vehicle Insurance Company Limited.

The money is held in two fixed deposit accounts (Sh110 million and Sh70 million) at Equity Bank Lodwar branch in the name of Irina Health and Motor Vehicle Insurance Company Limited.

"It is reasonably suspected that the two companies are shell companies used as conduits for laundering the embezzled public funds by senior county officials to disguise and give the funds a cloak of legitimacy," EACC detective Felix Asete says in court papers.

The EACC believes Mr Etiir and the two trading entities are proxies of an unnamed senior officer in the county government. Before the commission obtained court orders to freeze the accounts, the companies had received Sh263 million from Governor Jeremiah Lomoru's administration.

It is not yet clear even to the corruption detectives what goods or services they supplied to the county to warrant the payments.

Mr Etiir is employed as a security warden by the county government and is the sole proprietor of the companies and the sole signatory to their bank accounts.

"Preliminary investigations show that the two companies started receiving huge transfer of funds from the County Government of Turkana soon after their incorporation in 2022, raising suspicion that the companies could be conduits for laundering embezzled public funds for senior county officials," EACC lawyer Jacky Kibogy says in court papers.

The companies were registered in November 2022. From November 2022 to September 2024, they received a sum of Sh178.8 million

WEALTHY COUNTY OFFICERS

In Turkana, Abenyo Amathwel Etiir has acquired Sh263 million in slightly over two years between November 2022 and September 2024. Sh180 million cash in bank, has since been frozen.

In Nairobi, Nashon Wilson Kanani is at the Court of Appeal fighting with the EACC over the legitimacy of his Sh643 million assets. He is a co-director of a popular joint, Club 1824, on Lang'ata Road.

In Kisii, former Chief Officer Alphanus Mokaya lost Sh17.8m to the State in July last year. The sum was held at Stima Sacco.

(Akimata Limited) and Sh85 million (Irina Health and Motor Vehicle Insurance Company Limited). They subsequently transferred Sh180 million into the fixed accounts. "Other than from the County Government of Turkana, the companies have not received any transfers from any entity, public or private, in the course of the two years," the EACC says.

Mr Etiir is among eight senior officials of the county government and two businessmen arrested last week for allegations of embezzling Sh600 million from the devolved unit. The officials include Finance Executive Michael Eregae Ekidor, whom the EACC said was also found with Sh6.5 million in cash.

Various counties are facing serious corruption challenges exposed by court cases filed by the EACC and the Asset Recovery Agency (ARA), as officials battle with accusations of corruption, money laundering and economic crimes to acquire massive wealth. The forfeiture suits have unmasked deep fraudulent dealings and silent millionaires looting county coffers. A big share of the graft cases the EACC and the ARA are pursuing involve runaway corruption, where officials use relatives and proxies to trade with their employer.

The rising cases come at the backdrop of concerns that despite the counties receiving in excess of Sh1.5 trillion since the inception of devolution, a big chunk has been lost to corruption. In Nairobi, Mr Nashon Wilson Kanani, a county employee, is at the Court of Appeal fighting with the EACC over the legitimacy of his Sh643 million assets. He is a co-director of a popular joint, Club 1824, on Lang'ata Road. The assets in question include high-end vehicles, money in 12 bank accounts, an apartment in Nairobi, a house in Busia and land in Naivasha. The EACC is questioning how he multiplied his wealth to the excess of Sh643 million while his known income is a salary of Sh55,866.

The commission is seeking forfeiture of Sh643 million to the government on the grounds that it is unexplained wealth. He was sued alongside his wife, Reginah Muniyiva, and trading entities Willy Walla International Limited, Wilcoreg Limited, Bridge Side Farm and Regineez Enterprises.

The EACC is pressing them to explain sources of their wealth, comprising land, bank credits, M-Pesa transactions and cash received from January 2016 to October 31, 2022. "Those assets and funds have been acquired by Mr Kanani through corrupt activities, especially bribes and kickbacks. The wealth in question is far beyond the legitimate known formal income of Mr Kanani and his wife," the EACC claimed.

It says that of the over a billion wealth owned by Mr Kanani in concert with his wife, the source of over Sh600 million is unexplained. The anti-corruption agency said the explanations and evidence they provided failed to discount the cloud of doubt and suspicion over the manner in which the multimillions in bank deposits, suspect vehicles and land parcels were acquired.

The commission lost the forfeiture bid at the High Court but lodged an appeal, where the appellate court issued conservatory orders recently restraining Mr Kanani from disposing of suit properties, pending determination of the appeal. Besides using criminal law through the Director of Public Prosecutions to combat economic crimes, the EACC and ARA are using civil proceedings through forfeiture suits to recover assets obtained illicitly, under statutes like the Anti-Corruption and Economic Crimes Act and the Proceeds of Crime and Anti-Money Laundering Act.

In Kisii, for instance, former Chief Officer for Fisheries, Livestock and Veterinary Services Alphanus Mokaya, whose Sh65 million attracted the attention of the ARA, lost Sh17.8 million to the state in July last year. The sum was held at Stima Sacco Kisumu branch and was found to constitute proceeds of crime. He had claimed that the money was proceeds of sugarcane sales, livestock keeping and dog breeding.

Spousal consent Garam Investments advertised the auction of former CS's apartments in Ruaka and also in Juja

Why Kuria banks on wife to save Sh100m property

Spouse files case arguing that Equity Bank didn't seek her consent before registering assets as securities for Sh54m loans

BY BRIAN WASUNA

On April 8, 2025 the auctioneer's hammer landed on a block of apartments in Ruaka owned by Mr Moses Kuria, a senior economic adviser in President William Ruto's office, after the highest bidder offered Sh62 million.

Garam Investments last month advertised the auction of the Ruaka apartments, alongside another block in Juja after being instructed by Equity Bank to recover a Sh54 million loan owed by the former Trade and Industry Cabinet Secretary.

But the auction of the Ruaka property, and plans to sell off the Juja block, have hit a snag following a court ruling based on a legal principle that has in the last few years seen many financial institutions and land buyers burn their fingers – spousal consent.

Justice Jacqueline Mogeni last Friday blocked Garam Investments from auctioning the Juja apartments after Mr Kuria's wife, Joyce Njambi Gathungu, filed a case arguing that both the Ruaka and Juja properties are matrimonial assets.

Ms Gathungu further held that Equity Bank did not seek her consent, as Mr Kuria's wife and significant stakeholder in the properties, before registering them as securities for Sh54 million loans that the former CS borrowed in March, 2018.

Ms Gathungu is also seeking to revoke the auction of the Ruaka apartments. The dispute could delay, or even stop, the new buyer's acquisition if Ms Gathungu's case is successful.

Mr Moses Kuria at a past event. BONIFACE MWANGI | NATION

Justice Mogeni ordered that Ms Gathungu's case be heard on April 30, and that no transfer of the Ruaka property to the successful bidder, or auction of the Juja apartments be fore then.

Equity Bank is all too familiar with the legal principle, as it and many other lenders have lost several auction bids in the last five years on account of getting consent from spouses before charging prime assets for loans.

In property disputes where spousal consent is raised, the court is tasked with first determining whether both man and wife have an ownership stake in the asset.

If the court determines that both individuals have a proprietary interest in the asset, and that the lender or potential buyer did not seek the other spouse's consent, then the judge will, in most cases, quash the transaction at the centre of the case.

Justice Mogeni will, through the hearing of the case, attempt to determine whether Ms Gathungu has a proprietary interest in the two assets, and then make determinations on whether to stop the planned distress sales.

But for now, because Ms Gathungu has raised the possibility of loss on account of the auctions, Justice Mogeni has ruled that no transfer of the assets be completed.

Her case reveals that valuations have estimated the Ruaka property to be worth over Sh60 million, and the Juja one at Sh40 million.

Ms Gathungu holds that Equity Bank ignored her attempts to get statements on the loans owed by Mr Kuria, and a pledge to help repay the borrowings.

"The properties aforementioned were part of matrimonial properties with my children and I living in my matrimonial home in the Ruaka property and having matrimonial rights in the Juja property. On or about April 8, 2025 I was reliably informed that the Ruaka suit property was set to be sold by public auction for an alleged default," Ms Gathungu says in court papers.

"Immediately I learned of the same I walked to Equity Bank and requested for documentation on the two properties but the 1st respondent (Equity Bank) was not forthcoming despite numerous demands to provide the same and my undertaking to continue liquidating the loan amount when it falls due in order to secure my properties. All along I was never served with notices of sale or demand letters as required of a spouse," Ms Gathungu added in her court papers.

A week before Ms Gathungu's case, Mr Kuria's bid to block the auction flopped after another High Court judge, Aleem Visram, declined to issue orders suspending the April 8 auction, just a day before the exercise.

Garam Investments last month advertised the auction of the two properties after being instructed by Equity Bank.

In a case against Equity Bank and Garam Investments, Mr Kuria claimed that the Covid-19 pandemic had affected his businesses and overall cash flow.

Mr Kuria argued that the pandemic affected development of the apartments as the cost of construction materials significantly went up. He also blamed the loan defaults on medical bills following an accident with an electric blanket that left him needing at least seven surgeries to repair damage to his leg.

Theatre legend Mulwa tips playwrights, honoured at festival

BY ANTHONY NJAGI

The Kenya National Drama and Film Festival continued in Nakuru County with Karima Girls High School from Nyandarua County presenting an animated play titled Walls of Jeriko, a metaphorical piece featuring cat performers.

In the play, Catrina, the bigger cat, builds a "Jeriko wall" to prevent others from accessing her butchery and stealing meat. However, some cats are mysteriously "catnapped" under an unwritten societal rule called the "catnapping project" — now you see them, now you don't.

The performance came shortly after theatre legend Professor David Mulwa, who recently turned 80, and was honoured at the event, urged playwrights to use metaphors to avoid direct censorship in the wake of the storm that followed Butere Girls' High School play's Echoes of War.

Prof Mulwa said the drama caused by the play could be avoided if playwrights used metaphorical wording and symbolic action rather than blunt language and graphic images.

"In art, you can say nasty things about governance without making them notice what you're saying, because it is dressed in a metaphorical costume," he said.

He cited Kongi's Harvest by acclaimed Nigerian author Wole Soyinka as a classic example of how to critique ruling powers using symbolic language. He pointed out that the play contains some of the harshest critiques of governance, yet it has stood the test of time because of its use of symbolism and metaphor.

Prof Mulwa noted that theatre remains the only platform where people can offer stinging criticism of their government — not to offend, but to offer an alternative path for leaders.

Walls of Jeriko was written by Joe Murungu, renowned for his mastery of metaphor in storytelling. In 2019, he presented Riddles of Sangoma, which critiqued African governments' hasty cooperation with foreigners, symbolised by a balloon-dressed character representing a foreign power.

In 2018, his play Animal City Amity featured characters wearing animal masks — giraffe, lion, hyena — to represent different human traits and societal roles.

their choral verse By the River, scripted by Chief Principal Madam Elda Achungu.

Using a river as a metaphor for shared natural resources, the verse depicted a conflict between fishermen and farmers, incited by corrupt leaders. In the end, unity prevailed as the communities cast out the divisive figures and reclaimed their peace.

The piece, rich in symbolism and poetry, was co-scripted by Victor Achesa, Nobert Ayoyi, Francis Shikanda, and Foy Ongaya.

Winds of Change, a play written and directed by Kitagwa Kevin and acted by St Augustine Teachers' Training College Eregi, was a thrilling performance that saw Lion Dr. Vinu A. Patel Hall filled to capacity. The play revolves around a family in conflict. Priceless, a daughter to Spencer's mistress, wins her father's favour because of her intelligence and pleasant behavior.

On the contrary, Alex, Spencer's first son, is ill-bred and wants things the easy way. He seeks inheritance and goes to great lengths to get his father's wealth — even sending his sister away.

At the film hall, Karima Girls High School showcased a feature film on conflicts between parents and children over career choices. Kanyakine Boys High School presented Sabotage.

Political storm gathers over IEBC team to oversee 2027 elections

Process of reconstituting the electoral commission has been called into question by opposition leaders

BY ERIC MATARA

A political storm is building up with opposition leaders and the public raising questions about the ongoing recruitment of Independent Electoral and Boundaries Commission (IEBC) commissioners.

Days after opposition leaders accused President William Ruto of plotting a partisan takeover of the electoral body ahead of the 2027 General Election, the IEBC selection panel, which is interviewing candidates, is yet again under sharp scrutiny.

Amid concerns over the unexplained inclusion of six names in the shortlist for commissioner candidates, another storm is brewing. Former Head of Government Delivery Unit Peter Mbae has written to the panel alleging a push to have friendly commissioners in the electoral body as part of a scheme to aid President Ruto's re-election.

"The system is pushing to have friendly commissioners and a chairperson but they are doing it so carelessly. Are they doing it so that Kenyans can go to court and delay the process, so that the country falls into the trap of delayed 2027 polls?" Dr Mbae wondered.

Independent Electoral and Boundaries Commission selection panel Chairperson Nelson Makanda and his deputy Charity Kisotu on March 6. FILE IN NATION

Dr Mbae, through lawyer Ndegwa Njiru, has written to the panel's chairperson Dr Nelson Makanda, demanding transparency and accountability in the process. In the letter, Dr Mbae has questioned the eligibility of Ms Joy Brenda Masinde Mdivo for the position of IEBC chairperson. "During the 2022 General Election Ms Joy Brenda Masinde held the position of chairperson of the United Democratic Alliance

(UDA) party Electoral Dispute Resolution Committee. She is not eligible for the position of the IEBC chairperson," he says. He has demanded the application forms that the panel received from Ms Masinde and copies of the interview's hand-sard and/or transcript "to help us know if Ms Masinde disclosed that she had served as the chairperson of the UDA Dispute Resolution Committee five years preceding her application". In an exclusive interview, Dr Mbae said there is growing concern over several shortlisted candidates with links to the President and others who have served previously as State officers. He also claimed the composition of the selection panel is skewed, with two of members linked to President Ruto and his UDA party. The Nation could not reach Dr recent interview with NTV. The latest uproar comes a week after opposition leaders Kalonzo Musyoka, Martha Karua and Eugene Wamalwa claimed that President Ruto and his new ally ODM leader Raila Odinga were plotting to takeover the electoral body.

"This nefarious exercise is intended to rig the next General Election and perpetuate the Kenya Kwanza regime, which has lost the trust and confidence of the people," said Ms Karua. "The shortlisting process excluded Kenyans with credible qualifications while favouring individuals with ties to UDA and ODM."

Mr Musyoka said: "We demand for transparency and accountability and adherence to the rule of law in the ongoing IEBC commissioners and chairperson recruitment. Some names of those being interviewed are suspect."

Furthermore, the leaders claimed the National Intelligence was interfering with the process.

However, ODM dismissed the claims as unfounded and an attempt to discredit the process.

"The panel should be allowed to independently execute its mandate without political interference," said ODM Secretary-General Edwin Sifuna.

Last week there was public uproar after it emerged that the IEBC selection panel had added six candidates for the position of commissioner to the interview list. The initial list, published on March 14 featured 105 candidates. But on March 25, the list was expanded to 111 candidates.

The selection panel has failed to provide a satisfactory explanation.

Why lawmaker who filmed 2 colleagues fighting is in trouble

Investigators to hand in their report to the Speaker this week

BY SAMWEL OWINO

A Member of Parliament who recorded two of his colleagues fighting in Parliament on Tuesday last week could face sanctions for exposing the embarrassing spectacle to the public.

The Nation has learnt that parliamentary police and the Sergeant-at-Arms department — who are investigating the incident — have already identified the lawmaker behind the clip that has been doing rounds on social media platforms.

The investigators are expected to hand over their report to National Assembly Speaker Moses Wetang'ula this week. The Speaker will give the way forward to the House.

The source said that the lawmaker sent the video to a close relative, who is a blogger. Such recording is prohibited in the precincts of Parliament.

"The MP who recorded the video is in more trouble than even those who fought because he exposed the lowest moment of the House to the whole world in an undignified manner and also undignified the two female MPs," the source said.

In his communication to the House on Wednesday last week, Mr Wetang'ula said the recording was being investigated by parliamentary police and the Sergeant-at-Arms.

The Speaker has already banned East African Legislative Assembly (EALA) MP Iman Falhada from setting foot in the precincts of Parliament for 90 days. She is expected to present a written statement today on the incident, accompanied by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Harvesting Kenya Renal Association last year called for suspension of operating licences for alleged unethical practice

State investigation implicates Mediheal in organ trafficking

Kenya Blood Transfusion and Transplant Service has found 'suspicious activity' after probing 372 kidney transplants

BY LEON LIDIGU

A government report has flagged possible illegal organ trafficking following an investigation into kidney transplants at a hospital in Eldoret, Uasin Gishu County.

The Kenya Blood Transfusion and Transplant Service (KBTTTS) has found "suspicious activity for trafficking" after investigating 372 kidney transplants at Mediheal Fertility and Transplant Centre since 2018. This finding by a 12-member committee appointed by Dr Maurice Wakwabi, acting CEO at KBTTTS, after a fact-finding mission at the facility with other outlets in Rwanda and Uganda, could trigger a full-scale probe against Mediheal.

"The committee thinks there is suspicious activity for trafficking, but there is no sufficient evidence," states the report, which has been handed over to Health Cabinet Secretary Aden Duale.

"A common name, Yusuf, was noted in the foreign files and listed as next of kin in files sampled. There is a need to ascertain this status and investigate why this name is listed as such and his relationship with the foreign recipients and foreign donors."

Last year, the Kenya Renal Association called for the immediate suspension of the operating licences for Mediheal for alleged unethical kidney transplants. In a statement dated May 3, the association noted it had received reports of "transplant commercialisation and transplant tourism", which is outlawed.

This prompted the Health ministry to task the KBTTTS to investigate the claims. The KBTTTS is mandated to ensure access to safe and ethical use of human blood, cells, tissues, and organs, as well as the safety of donors and recipients.

The findings are in the report, Fact Finding mission at Mediheal

Hospital—Eldoret Report.

"The issues raised include concern over Israeli nationals receiving transplants in Kenya and returning to their home country, organised syndicate evading regulations in Kenya as occurs in organ trafficking, lack of relationship between the organ provider and the recipient, evidence indicating several kidney transplants involving foreign kidney donors have taken place in Eldoret at a clinic called Mediheal, allegations of doctors of Indian origin carrying out the transplant, and organ providers originating from Central Asia," the report notes.

Mr Duale told the Nation he had just received the findings. "I can assure you nothing will be swept under the carpet. I will summon the committee on Monday to discuss what they have established and will close down Mediheal for good if I have to because we cannot allow this to go on and put the lives of Kenyans at risk."

Reacting to a German TV investigative documentary aired on April 11, 2025, which established that an online medical company known as Medlead had been using Mediheal facilities in Eldoret to harvest kidneys from Kenyans at a fee and exporting them to German patients, Mr Duale said this must stop.

"I have watched that documentary by the Germans and it is so shocking and unfortunate. A Kenyan boy showed us visible scars as proof his kidney was taken away at a fee of Sh294,000 and when he got home, a huge chunk of that money was stolen. This cannot go on ever again on my watch," he told the Nation.

Financial probity Stricter controls for withdrawals enhance transparency, accountability and full responsibility

Ruto uses Uhuru script to evade scrutiny of billions from abroad

All money should be deposited into the Consolidated Fund, except where Parliament creates a specific fund or where state agencies use cash from their operations to defray expenses

BY PETER MBURU

Billions of shillings collected from foreigners travelling to Kenya by President William Ruto's administration was banked in Swiss accounts in a questionable deal reminiscent of the previous government's diversion of Eurobond proceeds to offshore accounts to bypass the Consolidated Fund.

Sh6.5 billion in e-visa revenues was channelled to the Swiss account instead of the Consolidated Fund, which is the national government's main bank account run by the National Treasury, and from where there are stricter controls for withdrawals, including mandatory approval by the Controller of Budget.

Former Attorney-General Justin Muturi also recently claimed Dr Ruto had pressured him to sanction the diversion of $1 billion (Sh130 billion) environment grant from "Russian oligarchs" directly to the ministry's accounts, but he refused and instead insisted that the cash be channelled through the Treasury.

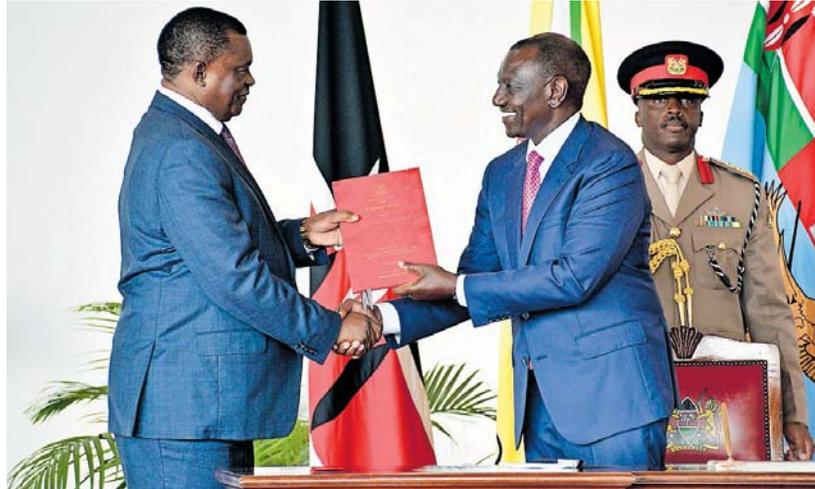

Questions have been raised about the motive of wanting to bypass the Consolidated Fund for suspect arrangements like in 2014 when President Uhuru Kenyatta's government funnelled $2.75 billion (Sh356 billion at the current exchange rate) Eurobond loan to offshore accounts, with the then Auditor General, Edward Ouko, expressing concerns that spending of the cash could not be traced to development projects.

Swiss firm

In the deal for electronic travel authorisation service (eTA) revenues, the government contracted a Swiss firm, Travizory Border Security SA, to collect billions of shillings from persons travelling to Kenya by offering security screening services. The company was paid Sh1.5 billion of the Sh6.5 billion revenues it collected between August 2024 and February 2025, and the money was received at a Swiss account as opposed to the Consolidated Fund, disclosures to Parliament showed.

The deal, which cost taxpayers 23 per cent of the revenues, has since flopped and the government now says the funds are being channelled through e-Citizen to the Consolidated Fund.

Mr Muturi, in a recent interview, also claimed Dr Ruto attempted to coerce him into signing documents allowing a Sh130 billion grant from Russian oligarchs for the tree-planting programme to bypass the Consolidated Fund, but he declined.

President William Ruto (right) hands over signed documents to Public Service Cabinet Secretary Justin Muturi at the State House, Nairobi, on November 19 last year. FRANCIS NDERITU | NATION

"It was a deal where they were purporting to give a $1 billion grant to allegedly grow three billion trees, towards the 15 billion [programme]. I told them that the $1 billion could only be by way of a grant but could not come directly to the Ministry of Environment because under Section 47 of the PFM (Public Finance Management) Act, it could only go through the National Treasury. They were trying to avoid the National Treasury, yet it was money from abroad," Mr Muturi said.

The former AG said the President attempted to coerce him into signing documents allowing the funds to flow into the country outside the Consolidated Fund—the documents brought to him to sign at the Dubai International Airport. The two botched deals have revived concerns about the place of the Consolidated Fund in managing public money, with fears of misuse and theft of money meant to benefit citizens through development projects.

The Constitution requires all money coming into the government be deposited into the Consolidated Fund, except where Parliament has created a fund to receive money for a specific cause or where state agencies use cash generated from their operations for defrayment.

"Money shall not be withdrawn from the Consolidated Fund unless the Controller of Budget has approved the withdrawal," it states.

Previous instances where the government has channelled public funds outside the Consolidated Fund left dire outcomes as citizens were denied development projects the billions of shillings were expected to finance, even as they were left with a heavy public debt burden.

The $2.75 billion (Sh356 billion at the current exchange rate) Eurobond borrowed by the government in 2014 is one of the biggest case studies in recent memory where the government bypassed the Consolidated Fund to receive the loans in offshore accounts. The loans were received in JP Morgan Chase Bank New York and Citibank N.A New York. When auditors went to verify the flow of the money from lenders to Kenya, however, they could not find actual cash receipts from lenders at the receiving banks' accounts. The auditors also revealed that Sh53.2 billion never reached Kenya.

"A portion of the proceeds of Eurobond totalling $604,560,737 (Sh53,201,344,900) was utilised overseas as payment of a syndicated loan. The balance of the proceeds of Eurobond from both the original issuance and the tap sale were received into the country," the Auditor-General stated in a 2019 report.

The audit also found that the portion of Eurobond that came into the country could not be traced to any projects as they were mixed with other government cash, leaving their impact on projects invisible.

"The National Treasury explained that these funds were fungible. Furthermore, some of the funds were expended outside of the Ifmis," the Auditor-General stated, recommending that subsequent issuance of international sovereign bonds be earmarked and be identifiable to specific development projects.

The law requires all government borrowings be used to fund development projects only, and loans coming in through the Consolidated Fund to ensure adherence. Mr Bernard Ndung'u, the Director-General of accounting services at the National Treasury, says the Consolidated Fund was created "for ease of control and oversight" of money meant to finance government operations.

"The Consolidated Fund is highly regulated. All withdrawals from the fund are initiated by the National Treasury, but approval by the Controller of Budget (CoB) is mandatory. The Exchequer Account, which hosts the Consolidated Fund, is domiciled at the Central Bank of Kenya (CBK), which ensures that withdrawals are authorised by the National Treasury and the CoB," Mr Ndung'u says.

Before withdrawal of any money that has hit the Consolidated Fund, the transaction must be backed by a requisition from a ministry or state agency explaining its purpose.

The Treasury then scrutinises the requisition in line with approved budgets for the fiscal year, before forwarding the request for approval by the CoB. The CBK must ensure approvals are made before cash is released. The Treasury is also required to gazette a summary of transactions on receipts into the fund and any payments from it on a monthly basis. Experts say government officials attempt to bypass the Consolidated Fund to escape stringent checks and balances that have been placed, which make it almost impossible to steal or misuse public money.

"The Consolidated Fund was established to safeguard public money and it has proper checks and controls before withdrawal of money from the account occurs," says Mr Bernard Muchere, a former internal auditor at the National Treasury.

The controls at the Consolidated

Fund makes it unattractive to steal or misuse funds once they hit the official government account, he adds.

Mr Muchere notes that there has been a lot of refusal to follow the law with regard to depositing funds meant for the Consolidated Fund, warning that evading the Consolidated Fund when dealing with public revenues risks misuse, where public funds could end up in people's pockets. "The reason why somebody may want to avoid bringing the money through the Consolidated Fund is to avoid existing controls that are established to ensure accountability and traceability of how the money has been used," he says.

Another audit on the use of 39 commercial loans between July 2010 and December 2021 revealed cases where Sh4.3 billion loans channelled outside the Consolidated Fund could not be confirmed to have been spent on projects. "The special audit, however, noted that drawdowns for three loans denominated in Euros totalling €29,510,462 were not available. It was, therefore, not possible to confirm the extent of utilisation of the individual loans," the 2022 report stated.

The three loans were contracted between 2013 and 2015. Former Treasury Cabinet Secretary Ukur Yatani says channelling public funds through the Consolidated Fund enhances transparency, accountability and full responsibility, noting that the account has foolproof controls. "You cannot disburse [from the Consolidated Fund] without internal treasury checks and CoB [approval]," Mr Yatani said.

Failed state

He said public funds flowing outside the Consolidated Fund "may happen in a failed state without a constitutional order. If this happens, all tenets of financial management will have been flouted—from transparency, accountability, prudence and good governance."

Mr Ndung'u last week said concerns over accountability and oversight of revenues state agencies get for offering different services, which are not received at the Consolidated Fund, made the government direct that all payments for government services be made through a single payroll (222222). "As we speak, there are concerns on accountability, reporting and oversight of funds received and spent outside the CF in terms of AIA, as the funds are solely under management of individual entities. This is the reason the government directed that AIA funds be channelled through a common payroll 222222 under e-Citizen," he said.

"However, on critical review, it would be necessary to bring the above funds under the purview of the CoB to enhance oversight during withdrawals, rather than waiting for the annual audits."

Mr John Mutua, the programmes coordinator at the Institute of Economic Affairs, also notes that when money meant to support the government in delivery of its work through budgeted activities comes in outside the consolidated fund, it becomes difficult to know whether it has been used properly.

Policy It's a transformative milestone in Kenya's journey towards devolved governance, says Murkomen

Public hearings on proposed pay for village elders begin tomorrow

Kenyans have a chance to express their views on what could be a landmark shift in community leadership

BY STEVE OTIENO

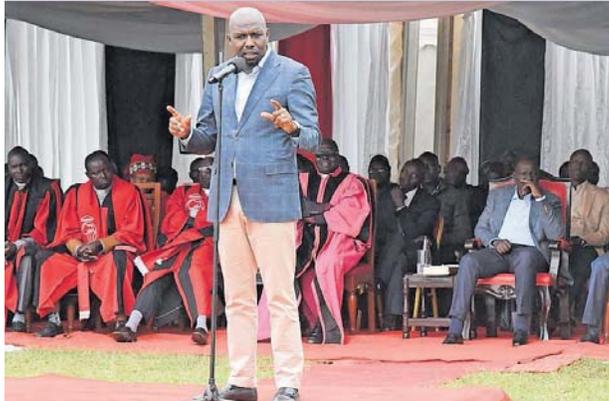

Should village elders—long seen as the unsung heroes of grassroots governance—be officially recognised, remunerated, and empowered by law?

Kenyans have a chance to express their views on what could be a landmark shift in community leadership and administration tomorrow.

The government, has, for the past two years, made it an open secret that it desires to formalise the role of village elders and it has even prepared a Draft National Government Village Administration Policy.

This proposed policy seeks to integrate elders into the National Government Administrative Units, granting them legal authority, clear responsibilities, and financial compensation.

These community figures, who have for generations resolved disputes, mobilised residents, gathered data, and reported threats to peace and security, may soon move from the shadows of informality to official recognition.

Public participation forums have been organised across 10 cluster venues throughout the country to allow citizens to give their feedback on both the policy and its accompanying regulations.

In Nairobi, public input will be gathered at Pangani Girls High School, with the forum catering to residents from Nairobi, Kajiado and Kiambu counties. Uasin Gishu County's Multi-Purpose Hall at the County Commissioner's Office in Eldoret will host participants from Nandi, El-geyo-Marakwet, Trans Nzoia, Turkana and Baringo counties. The Rift Valley Plenary Hall at the Regional Commissioner's Office in Nakuru will host residents from Bomet, Narok and Kericho.

In western region, Kisumu's Mama Grace Anyango Hall will serve Homa Bay, Migori, Siaya, Kisii and Nyamira counties.

Residents of Bungoma, Busia and Vihiga counties will give their views at Magharibi Hall in Kakamega County. In central region, Nyeri Cultural Centre will host forums for residents from Murang'a, Nyandarua, Laikipia, Kirinyaga and Samburu counties.

Meru Technical Centre will facilitate participation from Tharaka-Nithi, Embu, Isiolo and Marsabit counties. In the north-eastern region, the Government Guest House in Garissa County will serve Garissa, Wajir and Mandera counties. Le Technish Kilimambogo in Machakos will be the venue for residents from Kitui and Makueni counties. At the Coast, Tononoka Social Hall in Mombasa County will host the forum for participants from Mombasa, Kwale, Kilifi, Lamu, Taita-Taveta and Tana River counties.

For as long as villages have existed, elders have been the default custodians of order—settling conflicts, guiding community values, and serving as liaisons with State agencies.

Despite their pivotal role, they have operated unofficially, they have not been paid and they do not have legal status. They are often overshadowed by the gazetted National Government Administrative Officers.

This draft policy intends to change that by establishing a structured, accountable and well-resourced village administration system. It proposes the formal mapping and gazetting of villages, the introduction of eligibility requirements for elders, and the assignment of well-defined responsibilities. The policy also includes provisions for training, oversight and logistical support for the elders.

Interior Cabinet Secretary Kipchumba Murkomen described the draft as a "transformative milestone in Kenya's journey towards devolved governance", noting that the policy aims to narrow the gap between the government and its citizens.

Politicians and graft threaten to security, not children

The recent statements by the heads of our top security organs saying children on social media are a threat to our national security made me realise that every other institution in Kenya is now politically compromised to think in a linear fashion, with total disregard for their constitutional mandate.

Many State institutions and arms of government have abandoned their legal responsibility of being non-partisan, fair, just and working to protect public interest. Instead, they are mired in party politics. They have become not defenders of the Constitution, but that of political ideology in favour of the government of the day, however detrimental that ideology is to the country, our social and national cohesion.

Fundamental freedoms in our Bill of Rights includes freedom of speech and expression. These freedoms are not limited to social media or political rallies. Freedom of speech and expression does not mean that one should only hear what one wants to hear. Given our varied interests in life, one person's view of the world and issues will differ a great deal from the other's. Without having a platform for us to express ourselves, it becomes difficult to understand what makes someone tick or where their interests lie.

Anti-riot police escort a Butere Girls High School bus in Nakuru on April 10. FILE | NATION

Let us not kid ourselves to say that we have a democracy. Majority of our politicians vie for political seats not to serve the public but to enrich themselves

Kaltung D. Guyo | Education

Kenyan taking to social media to express their views on all sorts of issues in the country, not just on political matters, is a testament that they are able to express themselves and exercise the rights accruing to them from Chapter Four on Bill of Rights of our Constitution, precisely Article 33(1a and 1b). Article 33(1a) deals with our freedom to "seek, receive or impart information or ideas". Article 33(1b) gives Kenyans the "freedom of artistic creativity". This is where satire, cartoons, drama and music come into play.

It is therefore unfair and illegal for the government to stop students from performing a play because it is deemed unpalatable by a few in society. It is equally illegal to muzzle the media for exercising their fundamental rights to freedom of expression and speech.

If we just want to hear our praise, this world will be a very boring world. It will also be a fantasy world that makes us believe the lies we are told about ourselves by those that are unwilling to tell us the truth. Essentially, freedom of expression is one way of being given a chance to hold a mirror to ourselves and mend our ways.

The government's attempt to erode fundamental rights is a recipe for disaster. Fighting children expressing their frustrations on how their country is being mismanaged by adults is the wrong approach. Our problems, be they threats to national security or public funds, are a creation of adults who have the legal mandate and maturity to do the right things but choose not to.

Politicians in Kenya have been at the frontline of violence since multi-party came into being in the country. Last weekend's attack on some politicians was not instigated by children but by politically aware adults who rely on violence to gain politically. Violence within the political sphere is so rampant in Kenya that MPs don't think twice about squaring it out with fists and kicks within the Parliament's precinct. The latest involved female MPs fighting on the grass just outside Parliament; then they have the audacity to gaslight those that filmed the fight!

I believe there is not a single politician in Kenya that does not have their hands in corruption. It has become so bad that other countries are blaming politicians and senior government officials for being the stumbling blocks to investment, including by seeking bribes for tenders. Who needs whom? Is the government not meant to welcome investors with both hands at a time of high unemployment among the youth? It is no wonder the young are angry and turning to social media to express their disappointment with the government.

Let us not kid ourselves to say that we have a democracy. Majority of our politicians vie for political seats not to serve the public but to enrich themselves. Politics in Kenya is the only thriving industry because corruption has become the most attractive thing to politicians. They leave in their wake despondent unemployed youth, early deaths for lack of public healthcare, poor education infrastructure and insecurity. Unsavory mafia elements finding a home in Kenya courtesy of our politicians as reported recently about a Russian oligarch, is where the biggest threats to national security lie.

Please, let us not blame the children. They are alright. It is the adult politicians who take to corruption like money is running out of fashion, and rely on violence, that are threatening our national security. What needs focus is ending corruption and political violence to protect national security. Any other claims targeting children is gas lighting by the same people destroying the country for everyone else!

Future of our agriculture lies in science

With droughts, rising food imports and youth unemployment on the rise, how can Kenya chart a new agricultural path? For over 50 years, agricultural development in the country has largely depended on external aid. This support has been instrumental in building infrastructure, advancing technology, and supporting training programmes that have improved food and nutrition security across the country.

Now, the global aid landscape is shifting. Long-standing development partners are scaling back or changing direction. While this creates uncertainty, it also presents a critical opportunity for Kenya to redefine its agricultural future—by investing in science, innovation and stronger partnerships.

At the Kenya Agricultural and Livestock Research Organisation (KALRO), we believe science is the cornerstone of agricultural transformation. Our mission is to unlock the promise of Kenya's agriculture, ensuring food security, creating jobs and driving sustainable, inclusive growth. To do so, we work with strategic partners like CGIAR, a global leader in agricultural research and innovation.

CGIAR's new report, Insight to Impact: A decision-maker's guide to navigating food system science, provides the clearest signal yet that actionable solutions are within reach. The report distils decades of agricultural research into practical, ready-to-use insights.

The report outlines how targeted, science-backed innovations can raise productivity, increase incomes and create jobs. Take seed potatoes. Kalro, with support from CGIAR, has made improved potato varieties and disease-free planting materials widely available to farmers. These innovations have increased yields and incomes by up to 50 per cent, especially when paired with training in soil health and seed recycling.

What's more, this model has created business opportunities. The relatively low land and capital requirements for producing seed potatoes have made it an accessible enterprise, particularly for women and young people. Today, around 50 businesses are producing high-quality seed potatoes, reaching over 50,000 farmers nationwide.

We've also worked together to improve domestic rice production, collaborating on the development and dissemination of high-yielding, climate-smart varieties. By increasing the availability of certified seeds and delivering training to farmers, these efforts aim to reduce reliance on food imports.

At the same time, the challenges facing food systems today—especially from climate change—are complex and interconnected. Resilient seeds and breeds are essential, but farmers also need accurate, timely information to make good decisions. In 2023, Kalro and CGIAR partnered to deliver climate-smart agriculture advisories—offering guidance on what to plant, where, and when—via SMS and radio to 471,000 farmers, more than half of them women. The AgData Hub, supported by CGIAR science, is also helping us provide real-time weather forecasts and tailored advice to farmers and policymakers.

... targeted, science-backed innovations can raise productivity, increase incomes and create jobs

Science doesn't work in isolation. At Kalro, we have seen first-hand that collaboration—especially with the private sector—is key to delivering impact at scale. In 2023, we partnered with CGIAR to launch the AgriTech4Kenya Innovation Challenge. The competition attracted more than 1,100 applicants from 31 countries, with 25 teams selected for a six-month accelerator. These innovators received business training, mentorship, technical support and a platform to connect with agrifood industry players—bringing science-based solutions closer to market. When scientists, entrepreneurs, and investors work together, we unlock fresh thinking and accelerate progress on food security, job creation and climate resilience.

Our collaboration with CGIAR demonstrates that science-based, partnership-driven solutions work. But the future of Kenyan agriculture depends not just on what's possible, but on what we choose to prioritise. Now is the time for bold leadership and decisive investment. We urge national and regional policymakers to: put science first in agricultural planning and policy; support collaboration across sectors to drive innovation; and invest in scale-up of data-driven solutions that deliver real impact.

As Kenya's premier agricultural research institution, Kalro remains committed to ensuring that science serves people through better yields, higher incomes, climate resilience and equitable growth. We have the tools, the knowledge, and the partnerships. What we need now is the will to act.

Dr Kireger is the director-general of KALRO.

Enhance safety to curb mining deaths, injuries

Artisanal and small-scale mining is a lucrative business, but it also poses serious health and environmental risks due to toxic substances used and lack of proper safety measures and regulations.

Mines sometimes collapse, burying alive some miners and causing serious injuries to those lucky to escape death. It inflicts pain and agony on the victims' families and relatives. Indeed, the quest for the precious minerals often leaves a trail of deaths and utter desperation in families. Unsafe mining practices are the main cause of deaths.

According to government data, 89 people have lost their lives and 65 have been injured in mining areas between 2015 and this year. The worst-hit counties are Kakamega, Kisumu, Migori, Siaya, Taita-Taveta and Marsabit.

Unsafe mining practices also lead to the contamination of water and soil. The people in the mining areas are exposed to mercury and other deadly chemicals. Miners and local communities also suffer respiratory illnesses.

However, artisanal and small-scale mining holds immense promise of the economic transformation needed to improve the people's welfare and boost local businesses as the miners spend their money on goods and services. According to analysts, the mining industry has the potential to contribute 10 per cent of the country's Gross Domestic Product. It can also help to drive sustainable development, especially in the rural areas.

The common and often catastrophic mine collapses pose a grave threat to lives and livelihoods. Despite government bans on mining in some places, the deadly business still goes on. The deaths and injuries can be prevented through progressive policies and the use of modern technology to augment real-time hazard detection and improved emergency responses.

There is a need to make the industry safer by enforcing strict regulations, investing in good equipment and training workers on safety measures.

Grow rugby sponsorship

The 2024/2025 local rugby league ended on Saturday at the Kakamega Showground with Kenya Rugby Union (KRU) and clubs alike once again drawing crucial lessons from the season.

Kabras Sugar sealed their fifth Kenya Cup victory after beating Menengai Oilers 27-26 in a pulsating final, a victory that saw the team go a third season unbeaten. Daystar University Falcons were crowned second tier league, KRU Championship, champions after beating Masinde Muliro University of Science and Technology 39-12 in the final. Both teams have qualified for Kenya Cup next season with Falcons set for a debut.

Undoubtedly, rugby is one of the fastest growing sports in the country but KRU must think about innovative ways to market games, especially Kenya Cup, to make the sport more appealing to sponsors. We commend the management of Kabras Sugar, Menengai Oilers and KCB and other teams in Kenya Cup as well as the championship sides for investing in the game and ensuring that rugby talent is tapped and moulded.

However, these teams' efforts need to be rewarded accordingly for their investment in the game, which has seen teams like Kabras Sugar and Menengai Oilers tap into the enormous rugby talent in schools in the Western and Rift Valley regions. Players don't need to look beyond their borders to further their talent. But community clubs like Kenya Harlequin, Nondescripts, Impala and Mwamba have been struggling to make ends meet owing to lack of sponsorship.

Apart from institutional clubs that have strong financial backing, university sides that have good support from their respective management are on the rise and likely to displace community clubs from the top flight Kenya Cup sides.

The ongoing wrangles at KRU will continue keeping sponsors away from rugby and must be brought to an end. Lastly, when sponsorship comes, the bigger chunk of it should be allocated to the game and not any other ventures.

Choose revolution through verse

Kenyan society is primed for low-grade violence, where the escalation from verbal altercation to physical confrontation is often a very short trip.

The physical brawl between two women MPs—for whom armed security is provided at public expense—on the grounds of Parliament this week was only the icing on the cake. Fisticuffs are the spice of life in many county assemblies.

This proclivity to violence is a defining pathology of societies that are wracked by deep frustration but lack the facility for communication. Last month, a passenger in a public service vehicle was killed after an altercation over bus fare.

Any taxi driver plying his or her trade using mobile applications in Kenya often keeps some form of sharpened metallic instrument on the floor of the car. Most vehicles registered on these apps are of very low value, with little attraction for the car-jacker seeking to make a kill from reselling it, so the drivers' threat of violence is never really for the potentially violent robbers but rather for the occasional difficult client or the regular county official using by-law enforcement to collect rents for any infraction, real or imagined.

It is much rougher for the motorcycle taxi operators in Nairobi, who are under the thumb of some rule forbidding them from entering the central business district even as numerous motorcycle riders who enjoy protection ply their trade unhindered. It is the latter who will seize intrusive motorcycles, detain them together with the rider and call city authorities to effect arrest. One rider turned his screwdriver into a weapon to fend off a vigilante who wanted to seize his vehicle.

The rampant, heartless and indiscriminate extortion perpetrated by anyone with some authority on the poor and the hapless is driving more people to private forms of violence for self defence and protection. Typically, where there are differences of opinion, people find it easier to raise their voices rather than their arguments. Those who are morally and intellectually challenged will typically fall back on force. It is a habit that the government has honed to a disproportionate art form. In response to invective and innuendo, the stock government response is abduction and murder. Response to criticism comes in the form of censorship and gag orders.

Kenya was founded on the logic of colonial violence, and independence never weaned it off that addiction. Citizens' lives continue to be defined by brevity and brutality, which they reproduce in their families and communities—churches, mosques, or schools—because the State uses violence for self-legitimation.

The muscular deployment of armed police in combat gear and tear gas to intimidate high school students performing an unpublished play at a drama competition provides a clear indication of the government's confidence deficit. The play that Butere Girls High School failed to perform because of heavy-handed government censorship and repression is easily one of the better read pieces of dramatic writing from Kenya in recent times. Soft copies of the script have been circulating online and in social media groups.

Government forces have previously moved into theatre spaces to stop the performance of artistic creations considered offensive to the establishment, but these efforts have almost always had the unintended consequence of raising awareness about and popularity of the work. It is a shame that in a society deemed to be free and democratic, citizens have had to resort to courts to protect the freedom to create art and share it.

Historically, the banning and burning books, the proscription of ideas and the assassination of writers and thinkers have not been successful as a method of silencing dissent. On the flip side, the emergence of the schools and colleges drama festival as a site for dissent is testament that in this brave new information age, opinion will not be as free as we often deem it to be. In fact, Kenyans are turning every occasion into an opportunity to serve blistering commentary of government performance—from the turnstiles at an international soccer match to bereavements and funerals. Public anger and frustration with government and its functionaries is rising. The fusillade of criticism from every side and angle can tempt those in government to clamp down and crack down, but it would be a mistake.

Poetry can express dissent, raise awareness and inspire change without resorting to violence. Its forte is logic and persuasion, and it gives those with a contrarian view the opportunity to also sing their song. When the space for poetry and prose closes, so too does the opportunity for debate: escalation begins to look inviting.

Kenya's brief but chequered history has shown that the nation takes huge leaps into the future when its citizens talk to each other. The present circumstances call for more, not less, freedom of expression.

Give youth jobs, not just hustle mantras

I am a young Kenyan who is tired of hearing "hustle harder" everywhere I turn. It's the same line fed to graduates selling maize, engineers fixing phones and techies with nowhere to code. Hustle culture is catchy, but it's not fixing our job crisis—it's just masking it. We need real opportunities, not motivational posters. We deserve vocational training that leads to actual work, not dead-end courses. Fund start-ups with grants, not killer loans. And fix hiring—jobs should go to those who qualify, not those with connections. Hustle is great, but it can't beat a rigged game. Invest in us. Give us a fair shot. To my generation, let's keep pushing for change—our future's on the line.

Police shouldn't serve political interests

In a democratic society, the integrity of policing hinges on its independence from political influence. For Kenya to uphold the rule of law and protect the rights of all citizens, its police must remain neutral and professional. Recent events have reignited public concern over the politicisation of the police, such as the Butere Girls High School saga. The police must serve Kenyans guided by the Constitution, not political interests. Officers should be empowered to uphold the law impartially, without fear of political reprisal or pressure.

End worshippers abuse, humiliation

The incident in which pastor James Ng'ang'a slapped a congregant is disturbing, an outright abuse of power and a violation of human rights. Places of worship are meant to be sanctuaries of peace, compassion and guidance, not platforms for humiliation, violence and tyranny. Mr Ng'ang'a's actions are criminal, not spiritual. The government must prosecute such abuses. The Registrar of Societies should also consider deregistering institutions that condone such violence in the name of religion. It is time to draw a bold line between genuine religious leadership and performative, harmful theatrics. The safety and dignity of worshippers must be protected.

Act to curb the spread of cholera

A cholera outbreak has claimed six lives, with 97 infections recorded. Officials blame compromised water sources and unsanitary environments. In Nairobi, the situation is exacerbated by uncollected waste in densely populated areas. Authorities in these areas should ramp up response measures, including sanitation drives and public health education programmes. With school children at home for the holidays, parents should exercise extra caution and ensure their children do not play in or consume dirty water.

Boda bodas need rules, not bans

Boda bodas are a lifeline, but they're also a problem. I use them to beat traffic, and most riders are just guys trying to make a living. But the recklessness is scary. Last month, a friend got injured by a boda speeding the wrong way. We can't ignore this anymore. The government should enforce rules—helmets for all, no overloading—and fines for breaking laws. Counties could set up proper waiting bays too, instead of letting them block roads. Let's fix the system before more people get hurt.

LETTER OF THE DAY

What do we do if voters can't choose wisely?

In an ideal democracy, elections are sacred. The people vote, their voices are heard and the majority's will prevails. But what happens when the majority, crippled by poverty, tribalism, illiteracy and short-term emotion, continuously chooses leaders who fail them? What if the very act of voting—blindly, emotionally or under the influence of cheap populism—becomes the biggest threat to a nation's progress?

Sometimes, the uncomfortable truth is this: when voters cannot choose wisely, the wise must choose for them. And if that means bypassing flawed democratic processes to install a leader who will secure the nation's future, then so be it. History is replete with examples of "installed" leaders—men who took power not through perfect ballots, but through bold, decisive action.

Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore transformed a small, struggling island into an economic powerhouse. Freedoms were limited, yes, but corruption was crushed, education flourished, healthcare improved, and the country rose.

Vladimir Putin rescued a collapsing Russia from the chaotic remains of the Soviet Union. His hold on power is ironclad, and elections in Russia are hardly models of transparency. Yet he gave his people stability, pride, and strength.

In Africa, Paul Kagame of Rwanda took charge not by popular vote but by force and strategy. Today, Rwanda boasts some of the most efficient systems on the continent. And then there's Mwai Kibaki. His 2007 re-election was chaotic and disputed. Yet, in hindsight, it may have been the best thing for Kenya. His calm demeanor, his belief in economic empowerment and his quiet reforms laid the groundwork for growth. This is not an argument against democracy—it is a plea for meaningful governance. The value of a vote lies not just in its casting, but in its consequences. A democracy that continually elects thieves, tribal kings, or clueless populists is no democracy—it is slow suicide.

The ultimate measure of leadership is not how power is acquired, but how it is used. If a leader—whether voted in or installed—delivers healthcare, ensures education, creates jobs, lowers the cost of living, and minimises corruption, then perhaps we should reconsider our worship of the ballot box.

SCALING UP CLEAN COOKING SOLUTIONS

IN EAST AFRICA'S COMMERCIAL SECTOR

The shift to clean cooking solutions is no longer just an environmental concern, it's a commercial necessity. New sustainable cooking technologies are being adopted to enhance operational efficiency, cut costs, and align with global sustainability goals. This transition to cleaner energy sources, such as LPG, biogas, ethanol, and electric cooking, is improving domestic safety and reducing harmful emissions while elevating home cooking standards.

To document progress being made in East Africa in this respect, The EastAfrican newspaper has scheduled a special report titled, "Scaling Up Clean Cooking Solutions in East Africa's Commercial Sector". We are inviting clean cooking stakeholders - from product innovators to suppliers and financiers - to profile their clean cooking solutions and services.

Nyamira Confusion mars county assembly functions following factional wars

County trouble: Intrigues of the big mess hurting services

Omogeni wants a Senate committee to determine the legitimate county assembly location

BY RUTH MBULA

The adage, 'When two bulls fight, it is the grass that suffers,' perfectly fits the current political situation in Nyamira County.

This maxim exemplifies the messy and trivial political fights that have continued unabated since the August 2022 General Election. The electorate cast their votes in the hope that their lives would change through efficient and effective service delivery.

However, the leaders entrusted with the public responsibility to transform residents' lives have continued to perpetually lock horns in a nasty, endless fight.

The competing political factions and their hard lines have hampered harmony in the County Assembly and created a hostile environment for initiating and implementing development.

Late last year, the county set a new record by becoming the first to have two separate county assemblies, two speakers, and, at one point, two clerks, running separate programmes from different locations. One faction of the county assembly, led by embattled Speaker Enock Okeru, conducts duties from different towns across wards in what they refer to as Bunge Mashinani.

Trouble started after Mr Okeru was impeached in October 2024. However, he later mobilised and galvanised MCAs allied to him and reportedly gazetted Bunge Mashinani ahead of his ouster. He then moved to court, which temporarily reinstated him, pending the conclusion of the application that challenged his removal.

Typical of the now-apparent trend of disregarding court orders in Kenya, anti-Okeru MCAs could not stomach his return. This led to a violent confrontation during official business. Fearing escalation, Mr Okeru dramatically abandoned the official assembly building and led his team of eight MCAs to conduct its first Bunge Mashinani sitting at Manga Stadium.

On the other hand, his opponents, led by Ekerenyu MCA Thaddeus Nyabaro, conducted parallel house business at the County Assembly headquarters.

Mr Nyabaro was Mr Okeru's Deputy before the latter's impeachment. Mr Okeru's ouster came after a failed impeachment of Governor Amos Nyaribo in October 2024, when Mr Okeru was accused of protecting him.

Mr Nyaribo is accused of working with one faction of the county assembly—led by Mr Okeru—a situation that has created a political conundrum. Currently, the animosity among leaders has spiralled and drawn in Senator Okong'o Omogeni.

Mr Nyaribo has accused the senator of undermining his leadership and wanting to take over from him forcefully and unlawfully. He contends that Mr Omogeni has instigated constant Senate audit queries to dig up dirt aimed at fixing him.

"Our senator is the one fueling the fire, and he is like a priest here," claimed Mr Nyaribo during a recent appearance at the Senate County Public Accounts Committee (CPAC), responding to a Sh5.8 billion audit query on the 2023/24 budget, which failed to take off because of late submission of the audit report.

He told the committee the delay was due to confusion over the legitimate county assembly clerk. Mr Nyaribo said the county has been dogged by endless litigations over the clerk position, a matter that was only recently determined in court, hence the delay in responding to the Senate query. "I must obey the law. Until the court pronounced itself, we were divided. The clerk who was writing was suspended and was still writing," he submitted.

Mr Okeru was reportedly in a hostile working relationship with Clerk Daniel Orina prior to his impeachment proceedings. At some point, Mr Orina was accused of indiscipline, which led to his suspension and the appointment of Mr Duke Onyari in an acting capacity. Mr Orina refused to accept his removal, complicating the situation, which is reminiscent of the Wild West, where the law of the jungle reigned supreme—marked by roughness and lawlessness. "There seems to be a complete breakdown of governance institutions in Nyamira," observed CPAC Chair Moses Kajwang. "We cannot force you to love each other, but we can make you work. We have to use all means—formal and informal—to enable institutions to function so that Nyamira people can enjoy devolution like the rest."

The plot has thickened over which assembly Mr Nyaribo has been relying on to execute functions involving public funds. For instance, an additional Sh410 million has been approved for Nyamira, but it is unclear which assembly will appropriate it.

Based on his Senate statements, the governor seems to favour the Okeru faction, which has been conducting its business away from the county headquarters.

Mr Omogeni wants the Senate Devolution and Intergovernmental Committee to determine the legitimate assembly location and whether the Bunge Mashinani concept was lawfully passed.

Timamy confronts Garissa over disputed Dar es Salaam Point

BY KALUME KAZUNGU

Lamu Governor Issa Timamy has criticised neighbouring Garissa County for the contested Dar es Salaam Point along the Kenya-Somalia border.

The disputed area, which includes Ishakani village, encompasses both land and a shoreline, adding to the complexity of the issue. On various occasions, leaders from Lamu and Garissa have clashed over ownership of Dar es Salaam Point. Mr Timamy insisted in Mokowe that the point belongs to Lamu.

He cited the District and Provinces Act, 1992, which he said clearly shows that Lamu borders Somalia. The Kenyan law defines the boundaries of districts and provinces within the country, including the Nairobi Area, and is still in effect. It also provides for the amendment of district and provinces definitions. While the Act initially established the 47 districts and eight (8) provinces, the 2010 Constitution introduced a system of 47 county governments, which replaced the old provincial administration.

Despite such changes, the Act remains relevant in defining the boundaries within the current county system, though the functions of the Provincial Administration have been restructured to align with devolution.

Mr Timamy (pictured) said Garissa has no frontage to the Indian Ocean and should give up the push to annex Dar es Salaam point. "We've an existing border dispute between us and Garissa over the annexation of Dar es Salaam Point. Let it be clear that as per the District and Provinces Act, 1992, Lamu borders Somalia. The disputed area is inside Lamu. If Garissa claims to have a share within that area, I don't know. Maybe what they're claiming is deep inside the country of Somalia and not in Lamu," he said.

"We know Garissa has no shoreline. If they claim to have, let them demand it from Somalia. As for Lamu, we don't want any confrontation or tension over this. We won't entertain."

His sentiments were echoed by nominated Senator Shakila Abdalla. Ms Abdalla voiced her opposition to the annexation of a territory that historically and legally belongs to Lamu County.

'Nation' writer Pauline Ongaji bags June Biedler prize for cancer journalism

BY MERCY CHELANGAT

Nation Media Group (NMG) journalist Pauline Ongaji has won the prestigious AACR June L. Biedler Prize for Cancer Journalism by the American Association for Cancer Research (AACR).

Ms Ongaji scooped the award in the newspaper category for her story about the increasing cases of breast cancer in men.

Last year, Nation's Health reporter Helen Shikanda won the prize. Ms Shikanda became the first journalist from an Africa-based media outlet to receive top honours.

Ms Ongaji's story "Fighting stigma, fighting cancer: The rising threat of male breast cancer in Kenya", highlights how societal stigma, gender biases in healthcare, and limited awareness contribute to delayed diagnoses and higher mortality rates among men.

The story features individuals like Dr Moses Musonga, 73, who endured a decade-long battle with the disease.

Initially, Dr Musonga's symptoms were dismissed by healthcare providers, attributing them to less severe conditions due to the misconception that breast cancer predominantly affects women. Such delays in diagnosis are common among men, often leading to advanced stage detection.

Cultural perceptions in Kenya often associate breast cancer exclusively with women. This stigma discourages men from seeking medical attention or even acknowledging the symptoms.

This ignorance, combined with the absence of targeted awareness campaigns, results in late presentations at healthcare facilities. Healthcare professionals often overlook the possibility of breast cancer in male patients, further exacerbating the issue. Ms Ongaji's article underscores the urgent need to dismantle stigma surrounding male breast cancer.

Ms Ongaji and other winners will be recognised on April 27 during the opening ceremony of the AACR Annual Meeting 2025 in Chicago, Illinois.

Blow to Mackenzie as court reinstates 191 murder charges

BY BRIAN OCHARO

Controversial preacher Paul Mackenzie has suffered yet another setback after the Court of Appeal in Malindi reinstated 191 murder charges against him.

This is in relation to the Shakahola massacre of over 450 followers of his Good News International church.

Appellate judges Kibaya Laibuta, Weldon Korir, and Ngenye Macharia ruled that the length of a trial—cited by Mackenzie and his 30 co-accused as a concern due to the high number of charges—cannot, on its own, justify the severance of counts, unless justice demands it.

"We do not see how this case can be termed complex on account of the perceived 'overload' of counts. The very fact that they jointly face one charge of murder allegedly perpetrated by means of the same series of acts or transactions dispels the fear that the trial would prejudice them," the judges stated.

The judges noted that while High Court Judge Mugure Thande in Malindi correctly identified the general legal principles concerning the joinder or severance of charges, she erred in the application of those principles to the circumstances of this case.

As a result, they found fault with her decision to reject the inclusion of 191 counts in the charge sheet.

The appellate bench supported the prosecution's position that, apart from identifying the individual bodies—where possible—through their next of kin, the evidence of the cause of death in one case would generally apply to the others, unless contradicted by post-mortem results.

They further observed that the same pathologists would produce the 191 postmortem reports, and formal witnesses, such as investigating officers, would testify regarding their findings.

The judges argued that the accused, who are represented by a single counsel, would still have the opportunity to present individual defences.

Call for daily hearing

"Consequently, the impugned part of the ruling and orders of Justice Thande, dated May 17, 2024, directing the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (ODPP) to reduce the charges to no more than 12, is hereby set aside," the judges ruled.

They recommended that the Shakahola murder trial be heard on a daily basis by a designated High Court judge to ensure its swift conclusion.

"If it pleases Chief Justice Martha Koome, we humbly recommend that, given the public interest in this matter, a High Court judge be appointed to hear the case on a day-to-day basis until its final determination," they added in their April 11 judgment.

Governance Leaders say skewed distribution denies people proper services

State on the spot over new 1,100 administrative units

Kisumu Senator wants the Interior minister to explain how the units are created, and if all stakeholders are part of decisions made

BY COLLINS OMULO

Senators want the government to come clean on the criteria used in creating more than 1,100 new administrative units in the country.

This follows the gazettement of 1,104 administrative units in 31 out of 47 counties in February last year by then Interior Cabinet Secretary Kithure Kindiki, now Deputy President.

Kisumu Senator Tom Ojienda said the Ministry of Interior and National Administration should explain the method used in allocating the units.

Prof Ojiamba wants Interior Cabinet Secretary Kipchumba Murkomen to clarify if the government receives requests from local leaders, communities or stakeholders before creating additional administrative units.

Citing the example of Kisumu, the legislator wants to know whether the existing administrative units in the county are enough as well as their capacity to effectively serve the growing population.

"The CS should explain the criteria used by the ministry to determine the adequacy of units and whether Kisumu meets these thresholds, and are there any plans to establish new units in the county," said the Senator.

Nominated Senator Beatrice Ogola said Ndihiwa Sub-County in Homa Bay County is larger than some devolved units yet it only has two divisions.

She said the population in the area has grown exponentially, noting that there is need to carve out three sub-counties in Ndihiwa to bring services closer to the people.

The senator said establishment of well-structured administrative units is vital for efficient governance, security and equitable resource distribution.

"These administrative units provide structures that bring services closer to the people. The aim of devolution was to move services from Nairobi to the county level. Those services must, however, not be limited to the county headquarters," said Ms Ogola.

"They must go down past the sub-county headquarters, up to the wards, and even up to the villages. This will ensure efficiency, availability and equity of services to our people."

The government created 24 sub-counties, with 16 sub-counties in Tarasaa in Tana River, Tiriki East (Vihiga), Narok Amalo and Narok West (Narok County), Kambo, Murera, Kerio Valley, Kabras East, and Kabras West in Kakamega County, and Usigu in Siaya County. Others are: Suba Central, Suba West, Suba South, and Rachuoonyo West (Homa Bay), Dagoretti North and Dagoretti South (Nairobi).

Crime Criminals now focused on killing

Bandit strikes deal blow to peace efforts

Administrators have appealed to the government to arm them following attacks

BY BARNABAS BII AND FLORAH KOECH

Peace efforts in Kerio Valley have suffered a setback with renewed bandit attacks that have seen at least 10 people killed in the past two months.

The latest incidents include the killing of an Anti-Stock Theft Unit officer and a chief in separate attacks, dealing a blow to the one-year long multi-agency security operation to crack down on bandits and recover illegal firearms in the region.

The police officer who was in a contingent of security personnel on a mission to recover stolen animals at Chetulel on the border of Elgeyo-Marakwet and West Pokot was shot dead in a confrontation with suspected bandits. Elgeyo-Marakwet County police boss Peter Mulinge said additional security personnel had been deployed to flush out the bandits.

In another recent incident, armed bandits from Tiati sub-county launched an attack in the Kapkobil area in Marakwet East and shot dead a herdsman. The gang stole over 70 animals.

“Our security team acted rapidly and managed to recover all the stolen animals, but they are still in pursuit of the bandits who are out to destabilise the prevailing peace in the region,” Mr Mulinge said.

It is emerging that the armed criminals have changed tactics, laying ambushes and killing and escaping without stealing any animals. Among incidents reported last month were of two school-going children who were killed by the criminals and six people who were shot dead in Samburu county.

Further police reports confirmed the killing of four other people, including a National Police Reservist (NPR) in West Pokot County, following retaliatory attacks between the warring Pokot and Marakwet, while three people were shot dead in renewed attacks in Baringo County.

“What is happening is that the bandits are now purely on a revenge mission. They shoot to kill, unlike in the past when they would issue early warnings before striking, with livestock theft being their main aim,” explained Mr Mulinge.

At a meeting with security chiefs from Baringo County two weeks ago, Interior Cabinet Secretary Kipchumba Murkomen attributed the resumption of bandit attacks in Baringo and Samburu counties to unresolved administrative boundaries and said he is doing his best to restore sanity. His tour came five days after Loruk Location chief, Victor Sebei, 30, was gunned down by armed attackers at Lemuyek, under unclear circumstances.

Following the incident, chiefs in banditry-prone areas of Baringo appealed to the government to arm them, citing the constant threats on their lives. Led by Lokis chief Johnston Long’iro, they said they often put their lives at risk when hunting for well-armed individuals.

Among other interventions, the government has set up military camps in the Kerio Valley, created additional administrative units, and purchased modern security equipment in the intensified battle against bandits.

According to Mr Murkomen, Operation Maliza Uhalifu, comprising the Kenya Defence Forces and National Police Service launched two years ago has delivered, and the government was not relenting in tackling the criminals.

“If anybody thinks we are going to slow down or cede any part of this country to criminals, let them know that we are not going to go back,” the CS said during his recent visit.

He claimed some politicians are inciting the local communities as the clock starts ticking towards the 2027 General Election.

Trade war Trump has paused implementation of tariffs for 90 days, except for China

China: From courting Trump to tariff defiance

American officials have accused China of abusing global commerce system to grow its trillion-dollar trade surplus

BEIJING/WASHINGTON, SUNDAY

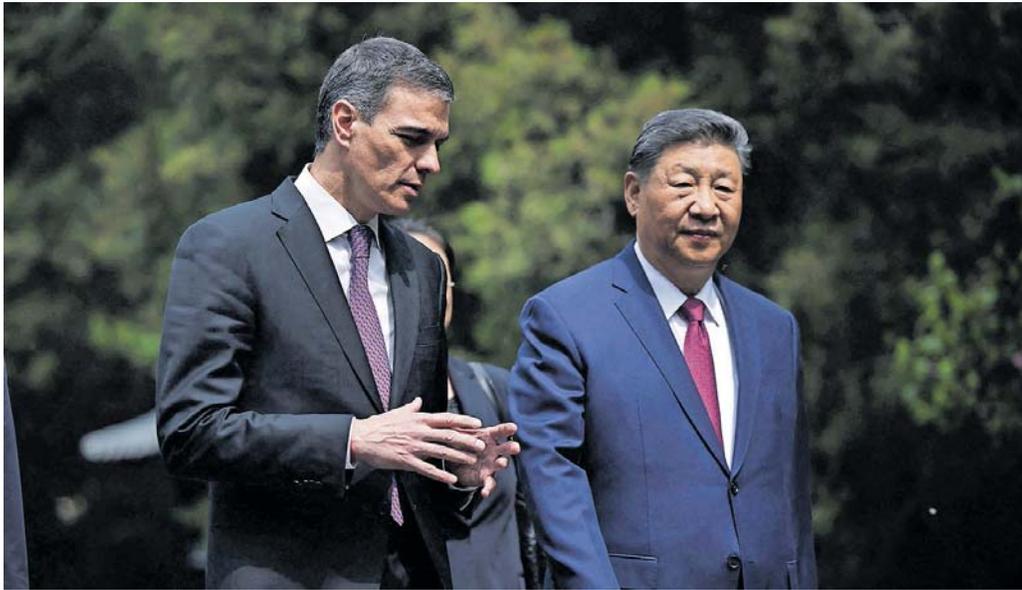

China has put civilian government officials in Beijing on "wartime footing" and ordered a diplomatic charm offensive aimed at encouraging other countries to push back against United States President Donald Trump's tariffs, according to four people familiar with the matter.

Communist Party propaganda officials have played a leading role in framing China's response, one of the people said, with government spokespeople posting defiant clips on social media featuring former leader Mao Zedong saying "we will never yield".

As part of the "wartime" posture, the details of which are being reported by Reuters for the first time, bureaucrats in the foreign affairs and commerce ministries have been ordered to cancel vacation plans and keep mobile phones switched on around the clock, two of the people said. Departments covering the US have also been beefed up, including with officials who worked on China's response to Trump's first term, they said.

The combative all-of-government approach after Trump's "Liberation Day" salvo marked a hard turn for Beijing, which had tried to avoid a spiralling trade war. For months, Chinese diplomats had tried to establish a high-level channel of communication with Trump's administration to defend what China's cabinet has described in state media campaigns as a "win-win" trading relationship. Optimistic Chinese observers even held out hope for a grand bargain with Trump over trade, TikTok—and perhaps even Taiwan.

This account of how China shifted from seeking a deal to punching back with retaliatory tariffs and threatening all-out defiance is based on interviews with more than a dozen people, including

Chinese President Xi Jinping and Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez speak as they walk along the gardens of Diaoyutai Guest House after a meeting in Beijing, China, on April 11. PHOTO | REUTERS

US and Chinese government officials, as well as other diplomats and scholars briefed on bilateral exchanges.

Four of them also described how Beijing's diplomats have been engaging other governments targeted by Trump tariffs, including sending letters seeking cooperation to several countries. Long-standing US allies in Europe, Japan and South Korea have also been contacted, two people said.

Most of the people spoke on condition of anonymity to describe confidential government deliberations.

China's ministry of foreign affairs did not return a request for comment. A spokesperson for China's embassy in Washington said in response to Reuters' questions that Beijing did not want to fight trade wars "but is not scared of them".

"If the US puts its own interests over the public good of the international community and sacrifices all countries' legitimate interests for its own hegemony, it will for sure meet stronger opposition from the international community," the official said.

The South Korean and Japanese embassies in Washington did not immediately respond to a request for comment on talks between their countries and China.

China played it wrong, they panicked - the one thing they cannot afford to do!

US President Donald Trump

After the initial Chinese retaliation, Trump said: "China played it wrong, they panicked - the one thing they cannot afford to do!" He has also suggested that Beijing wanted to make a deal but "they just don't know how quite to go about it".

US officials have also blamed China for the impasse because its trillion-dollar trade surplus with the world is the result of what they see as abuses of the global commerce system that haven't been successfully addressed through years of negotiations.

Trump on April 2 stunned the world with massive tariffs that he said would prevent countries like China from "ripping off" the US. Chinese leader Xi Jinping ditched official caution and issued a patriotic message casting doubt on whether American voters could bear as much hardship as the Chinese.

The "Liberation Day" levies have since been suspended for all countries except China for 90 days. With some exceptions, trade of goods between China and the US is now largely frozen, and Beijing is starting to crack down on trade of services, while warning its citizens against travel to the US and putting curbs on import of American films.

Even after Trump was elected on the promise of high tariffs, relations with Beijing got off to a polite start. Trump invited Xi to his inauguration, which was eventually attended by Chinese Vice President Han Zheng. Things started deteriorating soon after.

Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi tried to meet Secretary of State Marco Rubio, a China hawk who is sanctioned by Beijing, during a February visit to New York to chair a United Nations session but did not secure a meeting. Wang was also unsuccessful in his efforts to meet on that trip with National Security Adviser Mike Waltz, said a person familiar with the matter.

The White House believes that China should send a senior trade official instead of Wang to speak on commerce matters, according to a person familiar with the administration's thinking.

US Commerce Secretary Howard Lutnick has said he was "not engaging with China" and that Trump wants to negotiate directly with Xi. Trump told reporters last week that he would be willing to meet Xi, whom he also described as a friend. He has not detailed any specifics of a possible deal.

International relations expert Zhao Minghao at Shanghai's Fudan University said such outreach "totally doesn't work in terms of the Chinese policymaking system."

"For the Chinese side, usually there is agreement and work on the working level and then we can arrange the summit," he said.

The way "countries which have tried to negotiate have been treated so far this year also certainly has not done much to encourage China to sit down at the table," said Lynn Song, Chief Economist for Greater China at ING Bank.

TZ's Chadema disqualified from elections

DARES SALAAM • Tanzania's major opposition party Chama Cha Demokrasia na Maendeleo (Chadema) was on Saturday disqualified from taking part in this year's general elections after it failed to sign the 2025 Electoral Code of Conduct, said an official. Ramadhani Kailima, director of elections for the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC), said that as per the Elections Act, any political party that fails to sign the code will be disqualified from the upcoming elections as well as any subsequent by-elections within a five-year period. He said 18 registered political parties, including the ruling Chama Cha Mapinduzi, signed the code on Saturday. Chadema Secretary-General John Mnyika said in a statement that the opposition party could not sign the code after the INEC had failed to respond to its proposals. (Xinhua)

More than 114 civilians killed in RSF attacks

KHARTOUM • More than 114 civilians were killed in attacks by the Rapid Support Forces (RSF) on two displacement camps over the past two days in El Fasher, the capital of North Darfur State, a local official announced on Saturday. "More than 100 civilians were killed as a result of the brutal attack launched by the RSF militia on the Zamzam displacement camp yesterday (Friday), with dozens injured," Ibrahim Khatir, director-general of North Darfur State's health authority, told Xinhua. "Today (Saturday), 14 civilians were also killed due to another militia attack on the Abu Shouk displacement camp, with dozens more injured." Khatir said that among the dead in the Zamzam camp were nine employees of Relief International, a non-governmental organisation operating a field hospital in the camp. The RSF issued no immediate comment regarding the attacks. (Xinhua)

Growth in remittances during first quarter of last year

Cash from diaspora in slower 2pc growth

BY KABUI MWANGI

Kenyans living and working abroad sent home $1.23 billion (Sh159.5 billion) during the first three months of this year, marking a slower growth rate of 2.2 per cent compared to the pace recorded during a similar period last year when inflows jumped 18.8 per cent to $1.21 billion (Sh156.9 billion).

The slowed growth coincided with assumption of office of US President Donald Trump who came in with a raft of radical anti-immigrant policies, laced with threats of mass deportation.

America accounts for the largest portion of diaspora remittances into Kenya, with its contribution standing at 53 per cent as of last month.

Data from the Central Bank of Kenya (CBK) shows that Kenyans abroad sent home $427.4 million (Sh55.4 billion) in January, followed by $422.9 million (54.8 billion) and $382.2 million (Sh49.6 billion) in March and February respectively.

The combined amount wired back to Kenya between January and March this year translates to a $26.4 million (Sh3.4 billion) increase from the value of cash sent home during a similar period last year but marks a reduction from the $190.5 million (Sh24.7 billion) year-on-year addition recorded during last year's quarter one.

America's contribution to the remittances pool has also dwindled this year from the 56 per cent it held in March last year.

Since his inauguration into the White House on January 20 this year, President Trump has made decrees that have sent shockwaves across global economies, with the brevity of implementation timelines only working to compound matters.

Among the most far-reaching include withdrawal from the Paris Accord on climate change, the World Health Organisation (WHO), a squeeze on funding for refugees, and the latest imposition of reciprocal tariffs on exports into the US.

T-bill interest rates at 3-year low on effect of CBK move

Interest rates on Treasury bills settled at three-year lows after last week's auction, as the market started pricing in the Central Bank of Kenya's (CBK) newest rate cut. The interest rate on the 91-day T-bill fell to 8.5 per cent from 8.62 per cent the previous week, while the rate on the 182-day paper declined to 8.89 per cent from 9.03 per cent. This is the lowest the two rates have gone since March 2022. Charles Mwaniki

Energy During year ending June 30, 2024, State firm paid 172 entities

Why Gathungu doubts Sh431m Ketraco payout

Records show that recipients of the land compensation money remain unclear

BY PETER MBURU

The Kenya Electricity Transmission (Ketraco) is in the spotlight over conflicting records on how it spent Sh431 million in compensation for land owners displaced by electricity lines from Olkaria geothermal power plants to Kisumu.

Auditor-General Nancy Gathungu said recipients of the payouts by Ketraco remained unclear, raising questions on the legitimacy of the payments.

During the year ending June 30, 2024, Ketraco paid some 172 persons Sh207.5 million for land acquired during construction of Olkaria-Lessos-Kisumu transmission lines, the auditor-general reported.

Audit of the project, however, notes that during the previous year, Ketraco indicated that only wayleaves amounting to Sh27.3 million were outstanding.

"The compensation was paid to 172 project affected persons during the year under review. Previous year audited financial statements reflected outstanding wayleaves totaling Sh27,347,743 resulting to the unexplained variance of Sh180,165,915 paid as wayleave compensation in the under review," Ms Gathungu said.

The Olkaria-Lessos-Kisumu transmission lines project was started in 2016 and completed in March 2022.

Ketraco told auditors that the Sh27.3 million computation of outstanding wayleave compensation as of June 2023 was based on the allocated budget

OUTSTANDING

Wayleave amounts that remain unsettled according to Ketraco at the time, with the audit noting that "failure to record all the pending payables balance distorts accounting records."

In another project, the 220kv and 132kv transmission lines and sub-stations, the audit notes that while Ketraco spent Sh117.68 million on wayleave compensation, only Sh73.5 million had been reported as outstanding the previous year.

"Review of records revealed that the compensation relates to payables for the financial year 2022/2023 and earlier years. However, the previous year's audited financial statements reflected outstanding wayleaves totalling Sh73,501,859," the audit stated.

"Management explained that the outstanding wayleaves amounting to Sh324,606,257 were outstanding as of June 30, 2023, but the amount of Sh73,501,859 was disclosed based on the allocated budget," it said.

This left outstanding wayleaves that had not been disclosed by the end of June 2023 totalling Sh431.27 million, with the auditor-general faulting the failure to record them only to pop up last year.

Ketraco has been implementing construction of transmission lines valued at billions of shillings across different parts of the country, and there are plans currently to set up some of the lines under the public-private partnership (PPP) framework.

Each number in our Codeword grid represents a different letter of the alphabet. For example, today 2 represents G so fill in C every time the figure 2 appears in the main grid, then use your knowledge of words to work out which letters should go in the missing squares. As you get the letters, fill in other squares with the same number in the main grid and control grid. Check off the list of alphabetical letters as you identify them.

YOUR STARS

AQUARIUS | JAN 21 - FEB 19

You might have to work just a little harder to make money now. This might involve putting in extra time on a task, or it could simply mean that you have to make a few extra trips to the bank. Artistic insights might not be coming as profusely as usual, but this is all right. Relax and let things be this week.

PISCES | FEB 20 - MAR 20

Today could be one of the happiest days you've had in a long time. Perhaps you'll spend it with a current or potential good partner, going to quaint places in your neighbourhood. You could also hear from someone close that you may not have seen for a long time. An author whose work you enjoy could publish a new book.

ARIES | MAR 21 - APR 20

Today's planetary alignment can make relationships challenging. You may feel that people aren't sharing with you as openly as you would like, and it's hard to get them to do so without making yourself vulnerable. Do not stand around waiting for someone to say the right thing - continue to do what is right for you physically. You might feel a bit down now.

TAURUS | APR 21 - MAY 20

You'll feel great today and have no trouble channelling all your energy into your activities. Don't be surprised if you encounter some resistance. Creative as your ideas are, they may not suit everyone. In fact, you may confront some rebelliousness. Be persuasive and you'll get your way.

GEMINI | MAY 21 - JUNE 21

Be careful not to lose your temper today. You're champing at the bit these days, though your daring nature has been restrained by financial and professional constraints. It's useless to entertain grandiose illusions at the moment. Moreover, you can expect some confrontations if you try.

CANCER | JUN 22 - JULY 22

Today, time will freeze and even seem to go backward. Use this pause to reflect on your motivations. The astral clues seem to suggest that you're currently settling questions that concern the fate of another person. Perhaps you should be spending an equal amount

LEO | JULY 23 - AUG 22

The climate is tense today. You'll be aware of a feeling of restlessness and a longing for change, but you'll also be reluctant to make any real moves in that direction. Your judgment tells you that complaints that don't lead to action are meaningless.

VIRGO | AUG 23 - SEP 23

You can interpret the day ahead as an open-ended question about you. You may have noticed certain physical or psychological aspects that you're uncomfortable with. The day ahead may force you to take action to correct that attitude. You'll accomplish a great deal if you share your concerns with a friend or relative. By the end of the day you'll feel like your old self again!

LIBRA | SEP 24 - OCT 23

You've been doing well financially. You want to do better, but you might feel temporarily discouraged. It seems you have to keep working harder to keep up the pace. This is more the result of low biorhythms than any true assessment of your situation. Today you might have to work a little harder, but you'll get the results you want.

SCORPIO | OCT 24 - NOV 22

Today you might think you look awful and perhaps want to go out and change your whole look. Buy some new clothes and go for a workout. Even though you probably look pretty good, these activities make you feel good and increase your self-confidence. Your self-image is proportionate to your state of mind. You might just feel a bit down now.

SAGITTARIUS | NOV 23 - DEC 21

Today you might feel lonely even though there's no real reason for it. Your relationships should be pretty strong, but your biorhythms are down so you might be lacking in self-confidence. Phone a close friend and get together.

CAPRICORN | DEC 22 - JAN 20

Plans to get together with friends could be delayed by responsibilities. It won't stop you but it will mean getting together a little later. Someone close to you might feel a little down and seek a sympathetic ear. Try to get this person to forget his or her insecurities

Pipeline wind up 3rd in Africa Cup

BY JOHN KIMWERE

Kenya Pipeline women's volleyball team beat Tunisian side CF de Carthage 3-0 sets to finish third overall in the 39th edition of Africa Volleyball Club Championships in Abuja yesterday.

Kenya Pipeline, who were coached by Geoffrey Omondi in this year's championships that ended yesterday, also finished third last year.

The team, captained by Gladys Ekaru, beat their opponents 28-26, 25-14, and 25-18 to take the bronze medal.

Coach Omondi said the team will build on their experience at the championship to improve next year.

"I am happy because we have not dropped further, but we have a tough task of building a strong team for next year's competition. We will learn from our mistakes, and hopefully do better next year," Omondi said.

Pipeline fell out of contention for the title after losing 3-2 sets to Egypt's Zamalek on Friday in the semi-finals of the tournament. Kenya Pipeline lost 23-25, 28-26, 19-25, 26-24, and 12-15 to the Egyptians, who are the defending champions. It was Kenya Pipeline's first loss in the tournament, and it locked the former African champions out of the title race.

In the quarter-finals, Kenya Pipeline had demolished Rwanda's Armee Patriotique Rwandaise (APR) 3-0 sets (25-21, 25-17, 25-14). It was sweet revenge for Pipeline, who lost 3-1 sets to APR in the final of Zone Five tournament in Uganda last month. Pipeline eliminated Spiking Stars of Botswana in the round of 16 match after winning three group matches against Litto of Cameroon, Descartes of Cote d'Ivoire, and National Police of Rwanda.

The 2022 champions KCB finished fifth after silencing their fellow countrywomen Kenya Prisons 3-0 sets (25-21, 25-23, and 25-19).

In last year's competition, KCB finished fourth and Prisons fifth.

Kenya Prisons coach Josp Barasa said the team had learnt major lessons at the championship.

"We have accepted it, which indicates that we have a tough task to sharpen the teams to compete in the continent. In this round, we have been silenced by our Kenyan team," coach Barasa said.

FORMULA ONE F1 great Stewart says he's done his last lap at 85

Triple world champion Jackie Stewart said he had likely driven his last lap in a Formula One car after steering his title-winning 1973 Tyrrell around the Bahrain Grand Prix circuit at the age of 85.

The Scot - world champion in 1969, 1971 and 1973 - made light of the afternoon heat as he drove around at a relatively leisurely pace behind the safety car ahead yesterday's race start.

"I would have thought that's it," Stewart, still in his racing overalls, told Reuters when asked whether that was really the last time anyone would see him at the wheel of a grand prix racer. "You don't forget where first gear, fifth gear is. The car felt wonderful. I mean, we didn't go fast but the whole feeling of the car was great ... it was fun to do it."

Asked what he was thinking and feeling as he suited up and stepped into the car for the last time, Stewart smiled.

"This is a problem," he said with his immediate thought. "Getting dressed, so much stuff, everything's thermal. As if I were racing. "Somebody made the overalls from down here (in Bahrain). Actually, I think it's the same people who build the helmets. They did a good job."

If Stewart was truly hanging up his helmet, he had an exceptional one to remove: a special edition signed by all 20 living champions including Ferrari great Michael Schumacher, who has not been seen in public since 2013 due to a brain injury.

Seven times world champion Schumacher's wife Corinna helped the German sign the initials MS. As Stewart's son Mark explained, the helmet is likely to be the centrepiece of a global auction to raise funds for Stewart's Race Against Dementia charity funding research into a disease suffered by his wife Helen. ## 17-year unbeaten run: Rachier keeps Gor seat

BY VICTOR OTIENO

Veteran sports administrator and lawyer, Ambrose Rachier, has been re-elected as chairman of Football Kenya Federation Premier League club Gor Mahia for a fifth consecutive term.

In the elections conducted yesterday by the Independent Electoral and Boundaries Commission at Nyayo National Stadium Basketball Gymnasium in Nairobi, Rachier, who has been at the helm of the club since 2008 triumphed with 658 votes.

His only competitor in the race, Dolfina Odhiambo, garnered 456 votes.

Sally Bolo was elected the club's new vice chairman with 610 votes, defeating Victor Omondi who bagged 506 votes.

Katani Secondary School Principal Nicanor Arum was elected the club's new secretary general with 582 votes ahead of the incumbent, Sam Ochola, who secured 501 votes.

Arum's win sparked off wild celebration among the club's fans, who had pitched camp outside the gymnasium. Gerphas Ogolla was elected honorary treasurer with 559 votes, defeating Philip Nyakwana who got 524 votes.

Gor's previous Constitution had no term limits, allowing the office holders to run for many terms.

Since the club's 2019 Constitution stipulates that one can only serve two four-year terms upon re-election, this will be Rachier's final term at the helm of the club.

was meant to culminate into the club's elections, did not take place as planned.

Gor Mahia Election Board led by lawyer Gichu Wahome, conducted the elections. Only 1,992 members of the club were eligible to vote yesterday. Each of the four positions attracted two candidates.

Commotion erupted during the voting process forcing police to lob tear gas canisters in the air to restore calm.

The elections followed a directive issued by the Sports Disputes Tribunal (SDT) on January 15, instructing the K'Ogalo fraternity to hold elections within 90 days since the current executive committee had outlived its sell-by date. Club member Bernard Agewa Omolo had filed the petition.

On April 9, the SDT allowed the polls to proceed as planned but directed that the Gor Mahia Election Board to reduce the nomination fees and extended the deadline for candidates to submit nominations papers to Saturday 1pm.

Aspirants Dolfina Odhiambo, Sally Bolo and Philip Dalmas Nyakwana were the petitions in the matter.

In their ruling, the SDT's panel chairperson Benard Wafula and members Gabriel Ouko and Peter Ochieng' revised the nomination fees for chairman's and vice chairman's positions to Sh150,000 and Sh125,000 respectively.

Aspirants for the treasurer and secretary general's positions paid a nomination fee of Sh100,000.

Kenya's Biwott romps to victory in Paris Marathon

PARIS

Kenya's Benard Biwott cruised to victory in the men's race of the Paris Marathon, finishing 48 seconds before his closest competitor, while Ethiopia's Bedatu Hirpa edged compatriot Dera Dida by four seconds to win the women's race yesterday.

Biwott left others behind in the last 10 kilometres of the men's race, finishing in two hours, five minutes and 25 seconds, far ahead of Djibouti's Ibrahim Hassan, who was next to reach the finishing line.

Kenya's Sila Kiptoo, who was eight seconds behind Hassan, finished third in the men's race.

In the women's race, Hirpa, who beat Dida in a close finish at January's Dubai Marathon as well, finished yesterday's race in two hours, 20 minutes and 45 seconds as the 25-year-old pulled ahead of others in the last five kilometres with only Dida giving a good chase.

Angela Tanui, also from Kenya, placed third in the women's race, finishing 18 seconds after Dida in the French capital city. (Reuters)

Rift Valley tops championships as focus shifts to second term games

After five days of competition, teams from the region collected 95 points in total to finish ahead of Western and Nyanza regions

BY BRIAN YONGA AND ABDUL-RAHMAN SHERIFF

Rift Valley Region emerged the undisputed champions as the curtain fell on Brookside Kenya Secondary Schools Sports Association (KSSSA) Term One National Games at Eastern Teachers Training College, and Shimo La Tewa School in Mombasa County.

After finishing runners-up in Machakos last year, Rift Valley soared to the top this time around, clinching the overall title with an impressive 95 points. Western Region, the 2024 champions, narrowly missed out, settling for second place with 88 points. Nyanza Region maintained its third-place finish for a second consecutive year, posting 67 points.

Nairobi (62 points) and Coast (58 points) rounded off the top five, followed by Eastern (54 points), Central (44 points), and North Eastern, who trailed with seven points at the end of the five-day championships.

All Saints Embu High School (rugby 15s) and Dr Aggrey High School (boys' basketball) relinquished their crowns to debutants Vihiga Boys High School and Rift Valley's Laiser Hill Academy, respectively.

Western Region continued its dominance in other team sports. Musingu Boys High School and Tigoi Girls High School successfully defended their hockey titles, while Moi Girls Kamusinga and St Luke's Kimilili Boys retained their crowns in handball. In girls' basketball, Butere Girls Secondary School completed a historic hat-trick of titles.

Rift Valley's surge was led by its invincible athletics teams. The boys and girls swept the athletics titles, racking up 13 and 12 gold medals respectively and combining for 486 points.

Mercy Chepngeno of Lesirwo Secondary School earned Best Female Athlete honours after striking gold in the 1500 metres and 3,000m steeplechase. On the boys' side, Rioga Secondary School's Daniel Wasike (Nyanza Region) earned the Best Male Athlete award for his explosive sprints in the 100m and 200m events.

The region's dominance extended to cross country, where Kevin Kiprop Biwot (Sinonin Secondary School) and Mercy Chepkemol (Tiloa Secondary School) claimed MVP awards with commanding wins in the boys' and girls' races. Rift Valley placed first in both categories, followed by Western and Eastern in the boys' rankings, and Western and Nyanza in the girls' standings.

The boys' basketball final tipped the overall title in Rift Valley's favour, with Kajiado County's Laiser Hill Academy edging out defending champions Dr Aggrey High School of Coast Region 71-69 in a nail-biting finale. It was Laiser Hill's record-extending 10th national title after finishing third in Machakos last year.

Despite the loss, Dr Aggrey's Jacob Kayika was named tournament MVP for his consistent leadership and scoring bril-Western Region's teams continued to impress in handball, with Kamusinga Girls and Kimilili Boys defending their respective titles. Brigid Barasa (Kamusinga) and Wafula Abdulhakim (Kimilili) were named MVPs in the girls' and boys' categories.

Vihiga Boys, representing Western, also delivered gold in rugby 15s, defeating Kisii School from Nyanza in the final. The MVP title went to Alvin Shikanga of Vihiga. Vihiga are also the East African rugby sevens winners and national silver medalists.

In hockey, Musingu Boys and Tigoi Girls sealed Western's grip on the sport by winning their third and second straight titles, respectively. Kelvin Onyango of runners-up St Anthony's Boys High School (Rift Valley) and Monica Kwekwe of St John's Kaloleni (Coast) were named MVPs in the boys' and girls' categories.

Nairobi excelled in the pool, topping the girls' category thanks to Light Academy's Macrine Kalombo, who earned MVP honours with 21 points. In the boys' competition, Coast Region triumphed, but Nairobi's Curtis Kamotho of Strathmore School was named MVP.

This year's games marked the introduction of the KSSSA Sports Management Information System Portal (KEMIS), a digital platform used to verify players' eligibility. The tool proved effective with several players unable to feature due to a number of eligibility issues.

KSSSA Secretary General David Ngugi said the system will restore the credibility of the championships.

Director General in the Ministry of Education, Elias Abdi (second, right) presents awards to Brookside Dairy Limited team led by Marketing Director Reza Chabokro (second, left), General Manager Linda Obado and Corporate Communications Manager Wilson Okong'o on Saturday. KEVIN ODIT INATION

"We had a successful and competitive championship because there was a level playing field. These games are for kids and we will strive to ensure that is upheld," said Ngugi on the sidelines of Saturday's closing ceremony at Shanzu.

Brookside Dairy, the title sponsor of the games to the tune of Sh30 million, expressed pride in the level of competition. "These must have been one of the most fiercely contested games in a long time, and I know scouts were impressed by the talent on show here," said Brookside Dairy's Corporate Communications Manager, Wilson Okong'o.

With Term One games wrapped up, attention now shifts to Term Two competitions, which will feature football, volleyball, rugby sevens, netball, basketball 3x3, and racquet games.

League sides hit minnows, make Cup quarters

BY CECIL ODONGO

Football Kenya Federation Premier League clubs yesterday continued their dominance over minnows in the Mozzartbet Cup to make it to the quarter finals of the domestic competition.

Kakamega Homeboyz, Murangá Seal, Ulinzi Stars and Kenya Police all sailed through with Shabana, Bidco United and FKF division two sides Kibera Soccer and Kapenguria United all exiting the competition.

The four teams now join Gor Mahia, Bandari and Nairobi United, all who outwitted their opponents on Saturday and made it to the quarters.

Kakamega Homeboyz had a fierce clash against Shabana marred by crowd trouble eventually they edged Tore Bobe 1-0 via a late goal netted by Moses Mudavadi at Jomo Kenyatta Stadium in Kisumu.

It was revenge for Kakamega Homeboyz who lost 4-1 to Shabana in a FKF-PL clash at Gusii Stadium on March 2. Homeboyz are seeking to get back to CAF Confederation which they participated in the 2023/23 season after winning the Mozzartbet Cup in 2023.

"This was a sweet win and we now focus on preparing well for the quarter final stage because we want to go back to continental competition. It was a balanced match but we got our opportunity and capitalized on it to score," said Homeboyz coach Francis Baraza in his post match interview.

Defending champions Kenya Police had an easy time, dominating and beating lower side Kapenguria United 2-0 at Kenyatta Stadium in Machakos. The law enforcers goals were netted by Clinton Kinanga and lethal forward David Simiyu.

Murangá Seal thrashed Kibera Soccer 5-1 with Victor Haki netting abrace as Lucas Maina, Titus Kapchance and Wilson Kamau getting a goal a piece. Elvis Vid was on target for Kibera Soccer at Sportpesa Arena in Murangá.

A brace from Yakheen Muteheli was enough to help Ulinzi Stars beat fellow FKF-PL side 2-0 at Kenyatta Stadium.

Only Nairobi United is the lower team remaining in the competition after edging KCB 6-5 via penalty kicks on Saturday at Dandora Stadium in Nairobi.

FKF Division Two Side Compel FC could join Nairobi United only if they win either against AFC Leopards or Mara Sugar who are tussled in a row over the outcome of their round 32 clash. AFC Leopards appealed the decision by the FKF Leagues and Competition Committee to award Mara Sugar the round 32 clash between the two sides which aborted at Jomo Kenyatta Stadium in Kisumu on March 8.

LIVERPOOL

Liverpool resumed their march to a second Premier League title yesterday with a 2-1 victory over West Ham United as Mohamed Salah broke the record for most goal involvements in a season and Virgil van Dijk scored a late winner.

After West Ham had scored an equaliser in the 86th minute, skipper Van Dijk grabbed the winner with a header three minutes later in front of the Kop to put Liverpool two wins away from the title.

The result gave Liverpool a 13-point lead over second-placed Arsenal with six games left, while West Ham are 17th with 35 points, 14 points from the relegation zone.

Prior to kickoff, a minute's silence was held at Anfield to honour the 97 victims of the 1989 Hillsborough Stadium disaster. But the fans were in full voice soon after, chanting Salah's name to celebrate his two-year contract extension.

Van Dijk's contract expires at the end of the season but the Dutchman hinted he could stay, with a development expected next week.

"The main focus was to get three points and get a little closer to all of our dreams. Everyone knows how much I love this club, let's see what next week will look like," he said.

"I can say I'm very proud today to captain my 100th game for Liverpool. It was an emotional day with the Hillsborough anniversary."

defender and gave Luis Diaz a simple tap-in at the edge of the six-yard box.

Premier League record

The opener gave Salah the record for the most goal involvements in a 38-game Premier League season - 45 consisting of 27 goals and 18 assists.

West Ham came close to an equaliser when Mohammed Kudus found Alisson off his line and attempted a lob but the Brazilian keeper scrambled backward and tipped the shot onto the crossbar to give Liverpool a reprieve.

Alexis Mac Allister nearly doubled their lead from a free kick two minutes after the restart but saw Alphonse Areola get a hand to it as the ball rattled the crossbar.

Liverpool also had a penalty shout when a cross into the box hit James Ward-Prowse's hand but it was not given. At the other end, Alisson rushed off his line to deny Jarrod Bowen who was played through on goal by Lucas Paqueta.

As West Ham grew into the game, the Anfield crowd became restless while Salah also looked visibly disappointed when he was taken off as his mini goal drought extended to five games in all competitions.

A minute later, Liverpool gifted West Ham the equaliser when a breakdown in communication saw Andy Robertson score an own goal when he tried to deal with Aaron Wan-Bissaka's cross.

Robertson was livid with Van Dijk for not dealing with the cross as he screamed in frustration, but the captain made amends at the other end when he restored their lead three minutes later.

As Mac Allister floated the ball in from a corner kick, Van Dijk's towering header beat the keeper to spark wild celebrations at Anfield.

"I heard Robertson shout, but these things unfortunately happen," Van Dijk said. "There was time to make it right and luckily we did." (Reuters)

Kiddie Farm Juniors celebrate cultural diversity in style

BY WINNIE ONYANDO

Colourful Maasai shukas, sisal wraps, and vibrant smiles lit up the day as learners at Kiddie Farm Junior School marked their annual Cultural Day in style. The event was a celebration of Kenya's rich cultural heritage—and the young learners did not disappoint. From Kisii to Kalenjin folk songs, the stage was alive with rhythm, movement, and pride in traditions, even those not their own. Some parents clapped from their seats, while others jumped to their feet, joining their children in song and dance. The learners spent weeks learning songs and dances from Kisii and Kalenjin cultures, with the help of their teachers. The aim? To showcase unity in diversity—and it was a definite success. But beyond the costumes and performances, the event revealed that many of the learners are more fluent in English and Kiswahili than in their native languages. "Cultural Day is very important because we learn to appreciate other people's cultures," said Peyton Kubito, a Grade Five pupil. "I am Maasai, but today I presented Kisii and Kalenjin folk songs." The interesting part is that Peyton doesn't speak Maa, his native language. "My mum taught me Kikuyu, so I can speak a little bit of that. During holidays, we visit my grandparents and they teach me about the Maasai culture." For Katalina Sere, also in Grade Five, Cultural Day offered a chance to learn what she's missed. "I don't know much about my Taika culture, but I'm glad I got to learn about other people's traditions." Nicole Nicholas, a Grade Four pupil says she understands her culture well (Kisii), but was excited to explore others. "Today, I have celebrated other people's cultures. I even learned the Kalenjin dance!" Immanuel Adina, a proud Grade Five Luo learner, believes Cultural Day should happen more often. "I know my culture, and I've learned to appreciate others. Learning from each other is one of the greatest things we can do as learners." School Director Margaret Onchari said the event is about much more than dance and song—it's a lesson in identity and inclusion. "Today's children are growing up in a time where culture is slowly fading. Cultural Day helps them reconnect with their roots and learn how things were done in the olden days," she said. "Although these children are growing up in a digital era, it's important for them to understand how things were done in the past," said Ms. Onchari. The performances also featured vibrant Hindu dances and soulful Luhya praise and worship songs, offering a beautiful blend of Kenya's and the world's cultural heritage.

Roller Skates

INVENTION

Roller skates are boots with wheels attached to the bottom, allowing the user to glide across hard surfaces like an ice skater on ice. The first recorded use of wheeled skates occurred in 1743 during a performance in London. However, it was not until 1760 that Belgian inventor John Joseph Merlin patented the first "roller skate." Unfortunately, his design lacked a braking system and was difficult to steer, leading to its failure to gain popularity. During a party in the city of Huy, Merlin tried to showcase his invention while playing the violin, but the skates were hard to control. In the 1840s, the popularity of roller skates grew when Meyerbeer's opera Le prophète featured performers using skates to simulate ice skating. This sparked interest in roller skating across Europe. As figure skaters began developing more advanced moves on ice, roller skaters also sought to improve their ability to turn and manoeuvre on wheels. In 1863, James Plimpton, a Massachusetts inventor, revolutionised roller skates with his "rocking" skate, featuring a four-wheel design with independent axles. This made it much easier to steer and control the skates, leading to the rise of "rinkomania" in the 1860s and 1870s. Plimpton's design remains influential in modern roller skates. By the mid-20th century, roller skating had evolved into a competitive sport, with disciplines such as speed skating, inline figure skating, and roller hockey. Roller skating became especially popular in the 1970s and 1980s, particularly in dance halls, where people would skate to music in a fun, social setting. Though its popularity waned in the 1990s, it saw a revival during the COVID-19 pandemic as people turned to safe outdoor activities. This resurgence was sparked by viral TikTok videos and a broader pop culture revival.

BOOK: IN DANGER! ENDANGERED SPECIES OF THE WORLD
AUTHOR: DAHNE TUBOKU-METZGER
PUBLISHER: HEINEMANN EDUCATIONAL PUBLISHERS
REVIEWER: REV. KARIUKI WANYAMU

The author highlights why some animals and plants might disappear in the future. She states that their homes are being destroyed and that they are being hunted and killed. She also outlines how everyone can help save the animals and plants in danger.

Notably, she engages the readers with thought-provoking questions. For example, can you think of other reasons why we should protect our endangered species? One of the most interesting parts of the book is the 'Did you know?' column. Here, a reader learns facts like; it is against the law to buy or sell endangered animals and plants. Another interesting segment is the 'Try this' column. It engages a reader in exciting class activities. For example, Design an eye-catching NO HUNTING poster, with a slogan that people can remember. Well, apart from gorillas and rhinoceros, which other animals are in danger of extinction? Read the book to find out. The author uses simple language with new words including captivity, extinct, ecosystem, poaching, endangered and habitat. This helps boost a reader's vocabulary. The pictures make the story vivid. The story suits junior school learners. It teaches them about wildlife conservation and equips them with information about wildlife. For instance, a Japanese scientist once trained a chimpanzee to speak to him using a computer and a set of symbols.

The village hero

BY CAROLINE AMUNGA

The village of Lengo was always full of life. Goats bleated, children laughed, and the wind carried the sweet smell of freshly tilled soil. But something was different in Felix's house. Felix, a 13-year-old boy with a curious mind, sat on the edge of his wooden chair, watching his grandmother grind maize flour. "Gogo," he asked, "why do people call Nurse Amina a hero?"

Gogo smiled. "Because she makes people's lives better. A true hero doesn't need a cape, Felix. They just need a kind heart and courage."

That stuck in Felix's mind. He wondered if he could ever be like Nurse Amina.

Days later, excitement buzzed through the village. Nurse Amina was arriving. She was famous for her magic bag, which everyone believed carried answers to every problem. As soon as she stepped off her bicycle, the children rushed to her. "Tell us what's inside the bag today!" they shouted.

Nurse Amina chuckled and said, "Before I show you, we must do something important. On Saturday, we'll clean the well together. Dirty water can make us sick. Who's ready to help?" Felix's hand shot up. "Me! Me!" he said, jumping up and down. The others soon joined in, their faces lighting up.

Saturday came with bright sunshine. Villagers crowded around the old well, carrying tools and buckets. Nurse Amina began explaining why cleaning the well was important. "Water is life," she said, "but only if it's clean!" Felix listened carefully, soaking in every word. He joined the other children, picking up litter and singing songs as they worked. One of the songs was about washing hands, and Nurse Amina taught them a funny dance to go with it. Felix danced so hard that he fell into the mud, making everyone laugh.

That evening, Felix couldn't stop thinking about the day. "Gogo," he said, "Nurse Amina does so much. I want to help people, too."

"Well," Gogo replied, "why not start now? Being a hero begins with small steps."

The next morning, Felix got to work. He taught his friends the handwashing dance, and they turned it into a game. They sang it so loudly that even the village chickens seemed to join in! Felix also reminded his neighbors to boil their drinking water. Some laughed and teased him, calling him "Doctor Felix," but Felix didn't mind. He was proud.

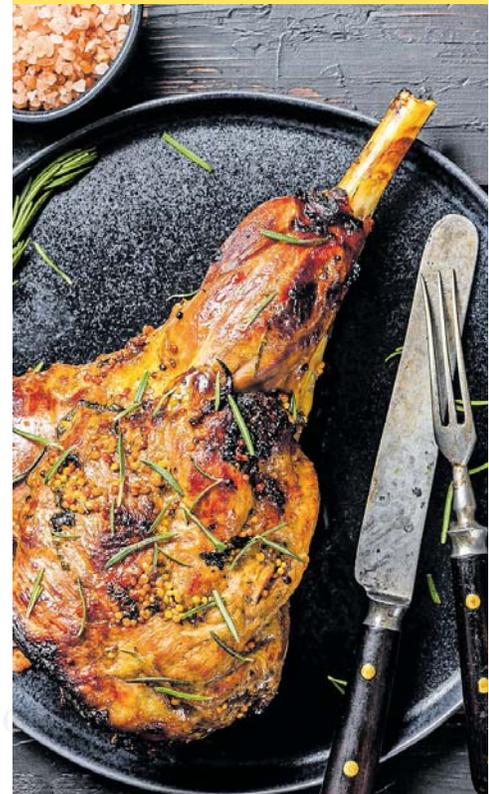

One day, Felix noticed something worrying. His neighbor, Mama Juma, was coughing non-stop. She waved it off, saying, "It's just a small cough." But Felix remembered Nurse Amina's advice: "When someone is sick, don't wait. Get them help." He told Gogo, and together they convinced Mama Juma to visit the health center. The doctor said she had a chest infection but would recover with medicine. "Thank you, Felix," Mama Juma said with a smile. "You saved me."

When Nurse Amina returned the next month, the village looked different. The well was clean, the children knew the handwashing dance by heart, and people were healthier. Nurse Amina looked at Felix and said, "You've done amazing work. You're a health hero, too!"

Felix beamed. He realised that being a hero wasn't about having superpowers. It was about helping others, even in small ways.

The moral of the story: Helping others and caring for your community can bring happiness and inspire positive change.

Roast lamb leg

MY RECIPE

Ingredients:

- 1 whole leg of lamb (2-3 kg)
- 6 cloves garlic (sliced or crushed)
- 1 tablespoon fresh rosemary (or dried)
- 1 tablespoon fresh thyme (or dried)
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 tablespoon paprika
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil (or olive oil if available)
- 1 cup water

Instructions:

- In a small bowl, mix the oil, garlic, rosemary, thyme, salt, pepper, paprika, and lemon juice.
- Make small cuts all over the lamb leg and rub the marinade deep into the meat.
- Let it marinate for at least 4 hours, or overnight in the fridge for deeper flavour.
- Preheat your oven to 180°C.
- Place the marinated lamb leg in a baking container and place on a baking tray. Pour 1 cup of water into the tray to keep the meat moist as it cooks.
- Cover the pan with foil and roast for 2 to 2.5 hours, depending on the size of the lamb.
- Halfway through, baste the lamb with the juices from the baking container.
- For the last 30 minutes, remove the foil and let it roast uncovered to brown the outside. You can raise the heat to 200°C if you like a crispier finish.
- The lamb is done when the meat is tender and pulls away easily with a fork
- Let it rest, covered, for 15 minutes before slicing to keep the juices inside.
- Serve with ugali, chapati, or garlic naan

For your safety, never attempt to cook without the supervision of a responsible adult.

Here's why schools need mottos

BY MESHACK YOBBY

A school motto is a short phrase that tells people what a school believes in. It often shares the school's main values, goals, and hopes for its students. They are meant to guide how people think, act, and learn every day.

The idea of having a motto goes back hundreds of years. Long ago, in the Middle Ages, noble families in Europe had what is called a coat of arms—a kind of symbol or badge to represent their family. Along with images like lions, swords, or eagles, many coats of arms included a motto. This was a short phrase that showed what the family believed in or what they were proud of.

These mottos were often written in Latin, which was the main language of education, religion, and government at the time. Latin was used across many countries, so it became a natural choice for schools when they started creating their own mottos years later. Since Latin doesn't change the way modern languages do, phrases written in Latin often seem more permanent.

Latin is no longer a language people speak every day, but it is still seen as a symbol of education and tradition. That's why many schools still use Latin in their mottos.

1. They show what the school believes in.

It tells students, staff, and visitors what the school values most. This can be respect, learning, honesty, or service to others. This helps guide the way the school's fraternity behave and the choices they make.

2. They shape the school's identity.

When everyone in the school knows and believes in the same motto, it creates a feeling of unity and identity. It reminds people that they are part of something bigger than themselves.

3. They guide actions and decisions.

A good motto can help teachers decide how to teach and students decide how to act. A good school motto becomes a tool for building good character and strong values.

4. They help inspire and motivate.

A well-chosen motto can push people to do their best. It reminds students to keep going when schoolwork gets hard. It reminds teachers of their mission to help young people grow.

5. They help others understand the school.

A motto helps the school communicate its values quickly and clearly to the outside world. Parents who are choosing a school for their child can learn a lot from a few simple words.

breed of rabbits which have pink eyes.

I feed them with green leaves and

I have also placed to provide them with drinking water.

Rabbit meat is rich in protein and their skin can be used to make

I collect the rabbit's urine using which I mix with the rabbit's to make manure which I apply in my kitchen garden.

Ep. 7: Western Influence in post-war Japan

BY WAFULA WEKATI

Kazuo Ishiguro shows how Western culture started to influence Japanese society after World War II. Through characters like Ono, Setsuko, Noriko, and Ichiro, he highlights the shift from traditional Japanese values to modern Western ways, brought about by Japan's defeat in the war.

One afternoon, while Setsuko and Noriko were engrossed in conversation, Ono quietly left to find his grandson, Ichiro. As he wandered through the house, he became alarmed by a series of loud thuds, accompanied by Ichiro's excited cries of "Yah! Yah!" The commotion came from the piano room—a mostly empty space, save for a German upright piano. There, he found Ichiro energetically galloping around, pretending to ride a horse through an imaginary world.

Deep in his game, Ichiro told his grandfather that he was too busy to play but permitted him to watch, provided he remained quiet. Ono noticed a sketchpad and crayons he had gifted the boy earlier. As Ichiro performed dramatic movements and mumbled unintelligible words, perhaps mimicking scenes from a film, Ono tried to guess which historical figure he was playing. He guessed Lord Yoshitsune or "The Ninja of the Wind," but Ichiro promptly corrected him—it was the Lone Ranger. Despite Ono's attempt to steer him toward traditional Japanese heroes, Ichiro remained absorbed in his cowboy fantasy.

When Ono picked up the sketchpad, Ichiro made several attempts to grab it back. Eventually, when Ono proposed they draw together, the boy agreed and sat beside him. During this quiet moment, Ichiro mentioned that his father had told him Ono stopped painting because Japan lost the war. Ono gently explained that he had retired simply because of age. Still inquisitive, Ichiro asked about his hidden paintings, but Ono instead suggested they draw a movie poster Ichiro had seen in the city. Ichiro eagerly sketched a towering, monstrous creature setting buildings ablaze, while people ran in terror. Delighted with his creation, Ono promised to take him to the film as a reward.

Ichiro laughed heartily when Ono teased that the movie might scare Setsuko and Noriko. He claimed the women, especially Aunt Noriko, would be terrified. Ono played along, suggesting they bring them just to see their reactions. Ichiro, excited, kept repeating "Hi-yo Silver!" with enthusiasm.

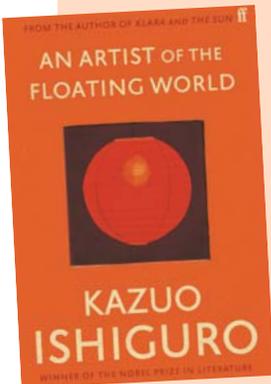

As Ono looked out into the garden, he noticed how well it was recovering from wartime destruction. Sugimura had designed it with care, giving it a natural, meandering charm. He also reflected on how Ichiro's obsession with cowboys stemmed from a film his parents had taken him to, followed by the gift of a ten-gallon hat—something unthinkable a decade ago.

Ichiro's father believed it was healthier for the boy to look up to cowboys than to traditional Japanese icons like Miyamoto Musashi.

Later, after dinner, Ono mentioned the movie again, wondering aloud if it might be too scary for the women. Ichiro grinned, but Noriko dismissed the idea, insisting Ichiro wouldn't enjoy it. Though disappointed, Ichiro brightened when Ono promised they'd go the next day. "We can't let the women rule over us, can we?" Ono joked, echoing subtle male dominance.

Setsuko, watching quietly, offered to stay behind with her father, hinting she had her own intentions.

The episode subtly reveals post-war societal shifts, gender dynamics, and Western influence clashing with tradition, all reflected through Ichiro's innocent world of imagination.

Fiona is surprised to find that her leave-on-loan to VOA has begun earlier than she had expected.

Despair in a broken system

FRIDAH KAMAU

Chapter 4 of Fathers of Nations, begins with the story of Fiona McKenzie. Fiona transitions as a journalist from the local Gambian news outlet to the Voice of America amidst growing political tension in The Gambia. The story begins with her leaving Seamount Hotel, unaware that her short trip to the office will be hampered by the now frequent roadblocks—symbols of the political instability that plagues the country. At Arch Number 22, she is forced to disembark and undergo inspection. Her taxi driver endures harassment from guards who extort a bribe under the guise of a "faulty brake" excuse. Fiona is quick to highlight, "You were gone for two eternities!" The taxi's driver ironic response, "I will ask the guards who I bribed to arrest me for bribing them" says it all. The society is ensnared in satire and corruption.

Arch Number 22, we learn in flashback, was constructed in memory of the July 22, 1994 coup d'état that toppled Gambia's former president. The monument, a colossal arch, high and wide, is a discomfiting reminder of the way changes in power can guide national discussion and reorder public memory. McKenzie's encounter with the taxi driver highlights an increasingly pervasive social problem: highly trained people driven into underemployment, working in an apparatus that quashes merit and decency.

Having finally made it to her office, Fiona is surprised to find that her leave-on-loan to VOA has begun earlier than she had expected. The assignment is in line with the new VOA policies of inclusivity—i.e., placing non-Americans within foreign bureaus. Her professional record and manner earn her the immediante confidence of Mr. Manley, Chief of Bureau, who assigns her to report on the upcoming high-level African summit.

Fiona is aided by American technology expert named Nick, who introduces her to a sophisticated surveillance tool called the Silent Listener. With this tool, Nick has intercepted a cryptic series of messages from unknown senders that indicate there could be a security threat being organised against the summit. When Fiona is stopped at checkpoints and witnesses officials taking bribes, we see how corruption adds problems for people.

The taxi driver's sarcastic 'bribe-money' remarks tell us a great deal about how desperate people become

SHORT STORIES

FIDELIS GITHINJI

Themes in Sins Of The Fathers

The story signifies how the wrongs committed by Rwafa affect Rondo. Some of the issues such as fear affect him when he is young and progresses into adulthood where he struggles with identity crisis and self-doubt. We have themes such as betrayal, tribalism, love and marriage, parenting, racism, vengeance, and identity crisis among other issues.

First, we will look at the identity crisis. Rwafa mistreats Rondo from a young age, which gives birth to self-doubt. He is unable to do anything since he does not believe in himself. Rwafa gets him a job at the Clarion but even when he writes an article, Rwafa asks him if he had someone to do it for him. At work, Gaston is Rondo's only friend. The other people keep laughing at him. He thus became a laughing stock and since he felt defenseless, he would join in their laughter. He desires to be his person but he lives in his father's shadow. His father does not approve of anything that Rondo does.

When he was four, Rwafa found him strumming away tunelessly on an instrument, he threw the whole contraption into the fire saying that his son would never turn into a rolling stone. In his adult life, Rondo gets married to Selina, who came from a rival tribe. As you can imagine Rwafa does not approve. Furthermore, the couple has two daughters and this angers Rwafa since Rondo does not give him an heir. This results in Rwafa feeling discontented thus feeling unloved by his father. Next, Rwafa is vengeful. His heart did not know of forgiveness. It is something he never desired to do. Rondo's mother explained to Rondo that his father was a Zezuru-Karanga and once upon a time they were raided by the maDzivi-ti-Ndebele. She added that war does bad things to people's minds. They always remember the pain of the scars rather than the relief of healing. Rwafa's biggest scar was that he could not forgive, not just his enemies but his friends too. Rwafa always talked of betrayals, of traditional enemies. His only desire was revenge. He talked of enemies of the state, looters and cattle thieves. He wanted them smoked out and punished. He was still angry at Basil Mzamane and he was willing to do everything to destroy him. He plans for the second street accident that ends up killing Basil Mzamane and his granddaughters, Rhoda and Yuna. His strong urge for revenge leaves Rondo heartbroken while Selina loses her father.

In the next article, we will continue with the discussion on themes. Do not miss out. ....

OPTIONAL PLAY

Conflict in a Parliament of Owls

BY RISPER OKWISA

Among the issues raised in the play, conflict is always at the centre of any work of literature. There is bound to be conflict whenever good is pitted against evil. Oyundi is contrasted with the owls as she fights for the greater good while the owls remain adamant about maintaining their rule to continue oppressing the other birds. Her fight translates to a voice of dissent that the owls are determined to quell at any cost. She is the hurdle between them and their oppressive dominance over the other birds. As the story unfolds, the owls search for Oyundi, who has gone into hiding to preserve her own life. Her major offence is going over their heads when she chases out the snakes from the kingdom. The snakes were working with the owls in a scheme whose end was to steal the eggs of the birds thus ensuring the population of the birds dwindled to the advantage of the owls. The owls were killing two birds with one stone. First, they fed on the day birds as they were omnivores in feasts where they invited members of the lion's kingdom. Secondly, the owls wanted to create the idea that the birds' lives were in danger to enable the passing of the Birds Protection Law that attracted an extra tax. The owls were working in cahoots with omnivores from the lion kingdom yet deceiving the birds that they were enemies. Oyundi saw through their tricks and enlisted the help of Ochunglo, the ant, who drove out the snakes. This made her to be viewed with suspicion as a threat to their dominance. She is accused of having proceeded without seeking clearance from police owl; a price is put on her head and she is declared a wanted bird. In pursuing Oyundi as a candidate for assassination, the owls end up killing thirty-three weaver birds who belong to the clan of Osogo. In his admission, Redstrings, a sycophant owl, sets the record straight that the target had been Oyundi. The weaver birds were innocent victims of a conflict between the owls and Oyundi. Another cause of conflict is Oyundi's opposition to the Moonlight Tax. Oyundi gains both supporters and adversaries in equal measure in her fight against evil. Tel tel and Arum Tidi help the owls spread propaganda that will help sell their agenda. Others such as Abang Chieth are also informing on Oyundi to the owls for personal gain. The supporters of her fight include dissident owls such as Socialite Owl and Feathered Beak together with the other day birds. When good is pitted against evil, it begs the question, who wins?

FUNCTIONAL WRITING

How to write an email

BRIGHTON DISSI

E-mail means electronic mail. It is essential to note that there is no spacing between the characters in an e-mail. The message in the email should be brief and clear. For one to send or receive an email message he/she must have an e-mail address (E.g. flokahenda@yahoo.com), a computer and a telephone line. All email addresses have three parts: Username, @ symbol, and the domain. Username: refers to the unique name that you select. It can be your real name or nickname. Example: flokahenda @ symbol separates the username from the domain. When you insert this symbol, your email program recognizes the character and sends the email to the domain name that follows it. Domain is broken into parts: the mail server and the top-level domain. The mail server is the server hosting the email account. There are such mail servers as Yahoo, Hotmail and Gmail. Advantages of using an e-mail. It is easy, fast and simple to write. One can get quick answers without leaving the comfort of his or her desk. It breaks the barrier of time zones

Dear Sir/Madam:

I am writing this email in response to your advertisement listed in The Daily Nation Newspaper on 11th March 2025 for the vacancy of teaching Chemistry and Physics that has arisen with your school.

I am a degree holder from Daystar University. I have taught for three years now. While teaching at Lusengeli Secondary school, I developed my teaching skills.

I have strong communication and interpersonal skills, and have the ability to make students understand my two subjects properly. I can help students with their decision-making. I desire to be part of the teaching team at your school so that I can nourish the minds of young students. I would be highly obliged if you could go through my curriculum vitae attached herewith.

*Yours faithfully,
 Sign. ....

LIFE SKILLS

How to sail through the storms of life

BY MARGARET MAINA

Life is full of ups and downs. Sometimes, we face overwhelming challenges from school-related stress to family problems, health issues, or any other personal struggle. Staying positive in the face of challenges can feel like an impossible task. However, maintaining a positive attitude is not only about being happy but also about being resilient, managing stress, and finding hope in the face of adversity. How do you achieve this?

Acknowledge your feelings.

When things are tough, it is natural to feel sad, frustrated, angry, or even scared. These emotions are part of being human. Ignoring or suppressing them can make the situation worse. Permit yourself to cry if you need to, or take a moment to reflect on what you are going through. Once you have acknowledged your feelings, you can then decide how to respond to them.

Focus on what you can control.

When life throws challenges your way, it is easy to feel helpless or frustrated. There will always be things in life that are beyond your influence, like the actions of others or unexpected circumstances. However, you can focus on what is within your control such as your actions, thoughts, and reactions. For example, if you are dealing with family difficulties, focus on how you can communicate better, set boundaries, or be patient.

Practice gratitude.

Try to take a few moments each day to reflect on the things you are thankful for, no matter how small they may seem. You might be grateful for a supportive friend, a warm meal, or even just a peaceful moment. Consider keeping a gratitude journal, where you write down three things you are grateful for every day.

Take care of your body.

Make sure you are eating nutritious meals, drinking enough water, getting enough sleep, and engaging in physical activity. Exercise, in particular, is known to release endorphins, chemicals in the brain, that help improve mood and reduce feelings of stress. Whether it is going for a walk, dancing, or playing a sport, find an activity that you enjoy and that makes you feel good.

Practice self-compassion.

Instead of criticising yourself, acknowledge that you are going through a tough time, and remind yourself that it is okay to struggle. Give yourself the space to heal, learn, and grow. Self-compassion helps to reduce stress and improve emotional well-being, allowing you to cope better with life's challenges.

Break problems into smaller steps.

For example, if you are struggling with a school project, break it down into smaller tasks, such as researching, writing an outline, and then completing each section. By focusing on one small step at a time, you'll feel a sense of accomplishment with each task you complete, which can keep you motivated and positive.

Challenge negative thoughts.

Negative thoughts are natural, but they can be damaging if you believe them. One way to stay positive is to challenge negative thoughts and replace them with more constructive ones. For instance, instead of thinking, "I am a failure," try thinking, "I may be facing challenges right now, but I am capable of learning and growing from this experience."

Find activities that bring you joy.

Even during tough times, make time for things that make you happy. Whether it is reading, playing a game, listening to music, or doing something creative, engaging in activities that bring you joy can provide a much-needed break from stress.

CAREER GUIDE

Career revolution: How AI is reshaping jobs

BY DR. EDWIN OGADA

Imagine waking up one day to find that robots and computers have taken over most of the jobs people once did. Sounds like something out of a sci-fi movie, right? Well, it's happening faster than you think! Artificial Intelligence (AI) and automation are changing the job market in ways never seen before. From self-driving cars replacing drivers to robots performing surgeries, technology is transforming industries at lightning speed. While some traditional jobs are disappearing, new and exciting careers are emerging.

So, what does this mean for you as a student? It means the future belongs to those ready to adapt, learn new skills, and embrace innovation. AI and automation are no longer just about machines working in factories. Today, they are used in banking, agriculture, medicine, media, and even education. Chatbots are handling customer service, drones are being used for farming, and AI-powered apps are diagnosing diseases. As a result, some jobs that rely on repetitive tasks are slowly fading away. But don't panic. While automation may take over certain roles, it will also create fresh opportunities in fields like software development, cybersecurity, digital marketing, and robotics engineering. The key is to prepare for this shift by developing skills that machines can't easily replace - creativity, critical thinking, problem-solving, and emotional intelligence. If you can master these, you'll be a step ahead in the new job market. So, how can you future-proof your career? First, embrace technology - learn coding, data analysis, or digital content creation. These skills are in high demand. Second, focus on areas where human skills still matter, like leadership, communication, and innovation. Third, be open to lifelong learning. The world is changing fast, and those who keep learning new things will stay ahead. Schools in Kenya are already introducing subjects like computer science and artificial intelligence, and online courses make it easier than ever to acquire new knowledge. The future of work is not about competing with machines - it's about working alongside them. The job market is evolving, but for those who are prepared, it's full of exciting possibilities. So, don't fear the future - embrace it and shape it to your advantage!
